Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

to the case of Cartwright vs. Town of Napanee, stating that Judgment was given in favor of the town, but without costs.

Laid on the table.
The Streets Committee reported that there was a couple of bad spots in the road on Roblin's hill which required immediate attention.

The Fire Water and Light Committee presented to the council an agreement between C. A. Anderson & Son and the Town of Napanee whereby the first mentioned party agrees to do the drawing of fire appliances to and from fires, at a cost of $50 per annum. When the fire engine is taken out the cost will be $3 a trip, which includes the returning of the engine to the station.

A by-law was passed authorizing the building of a cement payment on the east side of John street, from the post office south to the portion of permanent walk already built. One half the cost of the walk is to be paid by the town, and the other half by the owners of property abutting said walk, said payments to be in two installments, the first on November 1st, 1910, and the second on November 1st, 1911. Five per cent will be refunded if the whole amount is paid on the date the first installment is due, and five per cent will be added if payments are not made when due.

The by-law striking the rate for 1910, which had been given two readings at a previous meeting was taken up.

Some of the members of the council wanted to give the by-law its third reading, but the majority wanted it, opened up so some additions could be made to the estimated expenditure column.

On motion of Couns. Meng and Kimmerly the motion adopting the report of the committee on the second reading of the by-law was reconsidered.

Yeas—Alexander, Hawley, Kimmerly, Meng, Simpson, Steacy—6.
Nays—Osborne, Waller—2.

On motion of Reeve Alexander and Coun. Kimmerly, the motion was rescinded.

The report was then referred back to the committee.

The council then went into a committee of the whole to consider the report of the committee.

Coun. Meng took the chair. Moved by Mayor Simpson, seconded by Coun. Steacy, that a clause be added under the heading of expenditures to cover law costs, the amount to be fixed at $100. Carried.

Another item of $500, styled, estimated statement of the roll of 1910, was also added.

The general rate of 16 mills was then taken up and dealt with and made to read 17 mills.

The committee then rose and reported the by-law was amended and moved the adoption of the report. Carried.

The by-law was then given its third reading and finally passed.

A by-law was passed ratifying the agreement between C. A. Anderson & Son, and the Town of Napanee for drawing fire appliances.

A by-law was passed appointing Mr. John Lowry, sanitary inspector, at a salary of $50 per annum.

On the third reading of the by-law the following division resulted:

Yeas—Alexander, Kimmerly, Hawley, Osborne, Steacy Simpson—6.

Nays—Meng, Waller—2.

A by-law was introduced for the appointment of a Streets Overseer.

On the second reading of the by-law Councillors Meng and Waller moved that the committee rise and re-

WM. HINCH, BATH FARMER AF-TER BAKER MILLIONS.

(Kingston Standard)

William G. Hinch, a farmer of the Township of Ernestown, residing near Bath, was in the city and was making enquiries relative to the matter of the estate of the late Col. William Baker, who died in Philadelphia 104 years ago, having property now estimated to be worth about $150,000,000, in regard to which Mr. Hinch believes himself to be personally interested, inasmuch as he feels confident he is a descendant of the late Col. Baker, and therefore in a position to claim financial benefit from the vast undistributed estate which is said to be in existence.

To a representative of the Kingston Standard, Mr. Hinch said that his attention was drawn to this matter by his reading in the semi-weekly issue, dated Feb. 7th last an item of news regarding the Baker fortune, and various claimants for it, and on reading this he determined to make enquiries on his own behalf, believing that he will be able without difficulty to trace his own descent from the original owner of the many millions.

His great grandfather Baker was a pioneer settler of the County of Lennox, who came to Canada among the U. E. Loyalists, who settled here over a century ago. He was of German extraction, and this fact leads Mr. Hinch to believe that in case he should determine to press his claim, for a portion of the millions he could do so, with better chances than those of many other claimants, because he understands that under the terms of the will made by Col. Baker none but those of the German line of descent are entitled to become beneficiaries of it. At any rate so convinced is this Lennox county farmer that there is a reasonable prospect of benefit for him in it that he has determined to consult a solicitor with regard to it, and will act according to the advice given.

OUR CAPACITY FOR JOY.

Religion Ought to Take the Dull Ways of Life and Show Us Their Glory.

"They shall obtain joy and gladness."—Isaiah XXXV. 10.

The world never will become religious from a sense of duty. Men never will take up the religious way of life under compulsion, either physical, social, moral, or intellectual. This way must be evidently the right way, the best way, the wisest and most attractive, or it will never win to itself the real allegiance of men nor more than the perfunctory loyalty of a few.

It is strange that we so long thought of religion as an unnatural thing, as something which one had to force himself into, instead of regarding it as the most beautiful and natural way of thinking and living. We have tried too earnestly to make religion mean everything that was sad, doleful, painful, and drear instead of being in itself the very light and joy of life.

Whereas, the great teacher of long ago invited men to a feast as a figure of the new faith and the new social order, we have seemed to invite men to a funeral. Perhaps we have been trying to make men hungry for heaven by starving their hearts here. Yet, we will never enrich the world with real religion until our religion really means

THE DEEP HUNGER OF MAN and develops his capacity for joy here.

The world needs a faith that will give it a new confidence in life, that will teach it to life up its eyes and look forward, to let the dead past bury its dead and to press with joy into the future. The world needs such a view of the eternal and infinite as will bring its own spirit into harmony, peace, and the harmonious gladness of a free life in conscious unity with all life.

The world needs a faith that will make men enter on their duties, take up their burdens, live their lives with gladness and confidence, that will make life's meaning so clear and so high that we shall rejoice to live, that we will give it values that shall make all its cost seem but little to pay for its imperishable gains.

Religion ought to take our lives that seem to wander often in desert places and show us the upspringing wells of refreshment and the still waters that rise in the hills of eternity.

Religion ought to bring into the life that now is ours the essence of that harmony and joy which we fondly picture as constituting another and fairer world. If it does not give us a heaven within, one that flows out in refreshing from us, it may well be doubted if it ever can lead us into heaven at all.

How foolish we are if we have been so concerned with the forms and letters, the shells and vestiges, in which the glad, life giving religion of a past day expressed itself, that we have lost sight of the fact that it has a life and power for our day. We are like those who are so busy over the empty dishes of yesterday's feast that they miss the food for to-day.

HOW GUILTY ARE WE

if we lead others to think of religion as that which is only dreary, a matter of empty forms, of tedious disputes about words and phrases, devoid of all richness, sweetness, light, and power for them to-day, or as a matter of dull, blind compulsion, of fear and trembling, and if we have robbed them of that which might have made life mean altogether other than it has, have given them gloom instead of gladness.

If we really love our fellows it is our business to help them to see life in the largest and richest terms possible, to lead them to value their own selves and to select from the vast range of life's opportunities and possibilities the largest values, to show them the way of joy and gladness. This is religion, to bring men back to faith in life as worth the living.

If we are religious in truth we will take life ourselves in terms of its worldliness. We will show that we do believe in a God of goodness by taking it for granted that the life he gives us is rich in goodness, is the best possible, the richest and fairest now attainable; we will increase its significance. Religion will mean life's enriching and not its impoverishing.

Easter Lesson. The Empty Tomb,
Mark 16. 1-8. Golden Text,

Rev. 1. 18.

Three months ago we heard the beautiful story of the first Christmas, when God sent his Son Jesus to our old earth to help others and to make them see the power and beauty of a good life marred by no stain of evil. We thought that was a wonderful story. Now for several it really means. Whenever we see a funeral procession passing along our streets, as we so often do, we should remember the Easter tidings. When one of our friends goes home to God's other world of infinite beauty we should remember that same message of hope and comfort. Jesus said, "Because I live, ye shall live also," and "He that liveth and believeth on me, shall never die."

While Christmas is a happy day Easter is even sweeter and dearer, because it tells us of the life to come. But we should not keep the Easter gladness to ourselves. There are old people, sad people, tired people all around us longing for the cheer of that message. Perhaps there is some little child, too, who has never heard of the risen Sav-

THE GREAT LETTERBY FEUD

The feud began several years ago, at the Great Tetterby Annual Flower and Vegetable Show.

Mr. George Mason, the butcher, and Mr. Henry Goff, the grocer, were old cronies, who had smoked their pipes together these thirty years past, without a breath of dissension coming between them, and they passed together from exhibit to exhibit, criticizing and commending. Presently they came to a stand of fragrant sweet-peas. One shade of flower particularly pleased them.

Mason recognized the bloom as a variety named after the King of Italy. It was a very hot day, and Kitaly. It was a very hot day, and both men were obstinate. The argument became a wrangle.

When the parson, as arbitrator, declared that both men were wrong, and the bloom was a Miles Stafford, his verdict in no way led to peace, for each could now definitely taunt the other with having been quite wrong.

And so began the feud. Each had bitter things to say of the other; each inflicted on the other petty humiliations. And, finally, each determined to ignore the very existence of the other. Goff sent to Maylsham, the market town, for such meat as he required; Mason procured his weekly groceries from the same town.

And so we come to the time when Fate threw into the feud Ted Mason, the butcher's son, and Annabel Goff, the grocer's niece.

Save for a few days' holiday in each year, Ted Mason was a stranger to Great Tetterby. He had been learning the advanced methods of business in a London meat-shop for several years.

As for Annabel, she came to live with her uncle when his wife began to think that increasing years could well be met with a little extra assistance about the house and behind the counter.

As for Ted, he came home permanently because his father had determined to retire from the more active side of the butchery business.

Ted had been home but two days, when he was sent to Maylsham. It so chanced that the butcher's pony and trap were not available, and so Ted had had to walk five miles to Maylsham—a fact which caused him to look on the feud with disfavor for the first time.

In the cool of the evening he set out on his return to Great Tetterby, a market-basket of groceries, covered with cabbage-leaves, on his arm. Scarcely had he walked a mile, when he caught up another foot passenger—a slim girl, who bore on her arm a similar cabbage-leaf-covered basket.

With the customary courtesy of the country, they exchanged good-evenings. Then Ted slackened his pace.

"Let me carry that basket a bit," he offered, awkwardly.

The girl thanked him, but declined. Ted persisted, and, eventually, it came about that they walked on together, with both baskets in Ted's care.

At first they were constrained, downpour, once more thought of the feud with a distaste which amounted to bitter hatred.

And then, hurrying by under an umbrella, there passed Annabel. Ted saw her from the window, and rushed from the room.

Bareheaded, in the rain, he caught her up.

"Well?" said Annabel.

"Turpentine!" he replied. "Would you let me have a pint? If not, I must go to Maylsham for it at once. It's for father. Embrocation, you know. He's come home wet through."

Annabel stood considering.

"Look outside our side-gate in ten minutes," she said suddenly. "Don't let anyone see you."

He kept out of sight of the grocery shop till ten minutes had passed, then he stalked silently to the side-gate, snatched up a roll of newspaper, and walked home.

"Where'd you get it?" asked old Mason. "You couldn't have gone to Maylsham."

"I got it at—at," Ted faltered—"at Goff's. Said it was for your rheumatism."

Rather to his surprise, old Mason was some time in replying.

"It was good of old Goff to let me have it, after the way we've been carrying on," he said at length, quite gently. "If I see Goff, I'll call out a 'Thank you!'"

Next morning Mr. Goff passed the butcher's house, and Mason called out a shy, "Good day to ye!" But Mr. Goff only scowled at him and walked on.

It would seem that Fate was anxious to end the feud, for, after having weakened it slightly by the introduction of Ted and Annabel, it brought into the conflict Mr. Horace Porter.

Now, Mr. Porter was Mrs. Goff's uncle. He was also a man possessed of considerable property and a masterful mind. Altogether, not a man relations would willingly offend.

A fortnight after Mr. Mason's soaking Mr. Horace Porter came striding into the village on a surprise visit to his niece. Mr. Porter marched into the grocer's shop, announced that he was glad to see them looking so well, and that he was hungry.

Mr. Porter expressed a desire for a steak—and, moreover, a steak as soon as it could conveniently be served. Furthermore, Mr. Porter stated his intention of sitting down for a rest while George went along to the butcher's. Mr. Goff, scarce knowing what he was doing, picked up a basket, and wandered off in the direction of Mason's house.

The butcher's shop stood apart from the house, and was, indeed, little more than a shed, provided with hooks and a table.

M. Goff passed the place, glancing uncertainly at the shop from the corner of his eye. There was not a soul visible, and on the shop table lay a noble piece of steak, which must cause the eyes of Mr. Porter to shine with pleasure.

In a manner intended to be stealthy, he fitted across into the shop, and thrust the steak into the basket. Then he turned to leave, and at the same moment the door slammed shut, and the key clicked.

There came a moment of silence. Mr. Goff felt already the humiliation of discovery.

Ted, creeping softly away, turned, and began to crunch loudly over the gravel path towards the shop. He whistled blithely, coasting with a note of astonishment

Three months ago we heard the beautiful story of the first Christmas, when God sent his Son Jesus to our old earth to help others and to make them see the power and beauty of a good life marred by no stain of evil. We thought that was a wonderful story. Now for several weeks we have been studying some of the words Jesus spoke and the things he did during his ministry in Galilee. To-day, because it is Easter, we are to think of the gladness which followed the closing days of that helpful life.

Every junior boy and girl has heard over and over the sad, stirring story of Cavalry. After Jesus had been crucified on that lonely hill a rich man called Joseph of Arimathea asked Pilate to let him have the body, that he might give it burial in his own garden. He did this because he loved Jesus and wanted to do something to show his love and honor for his dear friend. Pilate consented, and after the body had been wrapped in fair white linen, perfumed with fragrant spices, it was laid to rest in the quiet garden. A stone and seal were placed against the door, and at the request of some of the Jews a guard of Roman soldiers was set to watch the tomb the next night.

Later in the year we shall study many of the comforting words Jesus had spoken to his friends, to tell them he would rise from the dead. They did not understand at all why that could be, so with heavy hearts they went about their work after his death, talking of the things he had said and done, and thinking how the light had gone from the sunshine and the music from the birds' songs, because their friend had gone away and they could see him no more.

That night, while the Roman soldiers were on guard, a shining angel came from heaven and rolled the great stone from the door of the tomb.

Very early the next morning, just as the gray dawn was breaking, some women came to the garden bringing spices to put about the body of Jesus. It was blessing time in Palestine, and I suppose the garden was full of flowers and fragrances, but the women did not notice either. Their hearts were full of sorrow, for Jesus had been with them, and they grieved to think he had vanished from their lives. As they walked they wondered how they could ever roll the heavy stone from the rocky tomb.

When they came to the place of burial they looked at one another in amazement. The stone is rolled away," they said.

But a more wonderful thing than that had happened, for as they stepped down and looked into the tomb door, it was empty. When they went into the little room, or chapel, out of the rock, they found an angel sitting at the place where the body had been. The angel told them not to be afraid.

After such Jesus, who was crucified," he said. "He is not here. He is risen. You will find him in Galilee, where he will meet you and talk with you just as he used to do."

As the women went away from the tomb they met Jesus himself, and he gave them a message to take to his disciples.

What a wonderful Easter it was! what a wonderful Easter message it is! None of us ever realize

While Christmas is a happy day, Easter is even sweeter and dearer, because it tells us of the life to come. But we should not keep the Easter gladness to ourselves. There are old people, sad people, tired people all around us longing for the cheer of that message. Perhaps there is some little child, too, who has never heard of the risen Saviour. Shall we not try in some way to give them a glimpse of the Easter joy? Then our own Easter will be brighter and more joyful.

We have read of Christ's power to heal sickness, to calm the waves on the troubled sea, and to quiet the storms of passion in human hearts. The most marvelous power he possessed, however, was shown in his resurrection, in the conquest of death itself. John, the beloved disciple, repeating some of the words of Jesus, says, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life."

STILL WAITING.

A millionaire famous for his love of horses, and also for the very low prices he paid for them, saw a very good looking hack in a Quaker's stable. As usual, he bid a low figure for the animal, which, to his surprise, the Quaker accepted.

His suspicions aroused, the rich man inquired if there was anything the matter with the horse.

"Have no fear," said the Quaker. "I can assure you that you will be pleased when you see him go."

The horse, when home, turned out an inveterate jibber; nothing could induce him when in harness to move a yard.

The angry millionaire interviewed the Quaker and exclaimed:

"You assured me when I bought this horse that I should be pleased when I saw him go."

"So I did, my friend," was the reply; "and you will be pleased when you see him go!"

LIVE CHIEFLY ON FISH.

Ninety per cent. of the population of Western India depends on fish for sustenance. China is a great importer of herring and other salt fish, and Hong Kong receives a million cases of it a month. The Japanese have a very fine herring in their waters, which they catch in large quantities, but they consider it so valuable for fertilizing that they will not let it be sold as food.

"You can answer that best yourself," replied the clerk of the Florida hotel. "How much have you got?"

evenings. Then Ted slackened his pace.

"Let me carry that basket a bit," he offered, awkwardly.

The girl thanked him, but declined. Ted persisted, and, eventually, it came about that they walked on together, with both baskets in Ted's care.

At first they were constrained, but presently the mutual information that they were both almost strangers to the district led to a more friendly condition of affairs. The fact that both were bound for Great Tetterby seemed to give each of them pleasure.

"How long are you staying in Tetterby?" asked the girl.

"For good," he replied. "I'm going to look after my father's business. P'raps you know him? He's the butcher—Mason, the butcher."

And then Ted was considerably surprised, for the girl stood still in the road to gaze at him with dismay.

"I heard you'd come," she said. "I'm Annabel Goff—"

"Old Goff's niece?" gasped Ted.

"Mister Goff's niece," she said, with chilling emphasis. There was a pause, and Ted put down a basket to scratch his ear in perplexity.

She stooped swiftly and picked up the basket Ted had set down. Then she walked on at a brisk pace.

Now, most country baskets—especially when covered with cabbage-leaves—are similar. And so it came about that later, the grocer's wife and Annabel were staring at a basket filled with groceries, while Mr. Mason, the butcher, was glaring at a large sirloin of beef.

"Must have made mistake—wrong basket!" ejaculated Ted incoherently. And, snatching up the basket, he disappeared.

Annabel was wandering down the village, the basket of groceries on her arm. Ted, bearing the sirloin of beef in his basket, rushed up the road to her.

"Sorry!" he said, as they exchanged baskets.

"It was as much my fault as yours," said Annabel.

"Did you get into a row?" asked Ted.

The girl nodded. "May I—may I speak when we meet, or—?" ventured Ted eagerly.

"It would make uncle very angry," said Annabel primly; "and I'm not going to do anything he wouldn't like."

She turned and left him. He stood looking after her ruefully, and reflected on the feud with growing disfavor.

There came a bright day, when Mr. Mason went shooting. The brightness of the day proved deceptive, for presently the clouds banked up, and Mr. Mason found himself caught in a thunderstorm. There was no shelter, and so, some hours later, a very drenched butcher stamped into the village, and went to bed to wait for rheumatism.

Now, it is chanced that Mr. Mason pinned his faith to a certain home-made embrocation, of which turpentine was the chief ingredient. And there was no turpentine in the house.

Mr. Mason ordered Ted to harness the pony and drive post-haste to Maylisham for a pint. Ted, glancing through the window at the

at the same moment the door slammed shut, and the key clicked.

There came a moment of silence. Mr. Goff felt already the humiliation of discovery.

Ted, creeping softly away, turned, and began to crunch loudly over the gravel path towards the shop. He whistled blithely, ceasing with a note of astonishment when the door refused to open.

"Why, it's locked!" said Ted, aloud. "I wonder who locked it?"

Mr. Goff, in an agony of fear, breathed loudly.

"Why, I do believe there's somebody inside!" exclaimed Ted. "I'd better not open the door; it might be a thief. I'll look through the key-hole, and see who it is."

Mr. Goff frantically stepped out of range of the keyhole.

Then another step sounded on the gravel.

"Hallo, dad! I've got a surprise for you!" said Ted blithely. "Who do you think is in there?"

"Can't say," replied the mystified Mason.

"Mr. Goff!" announced Ted.

"Goff!" exclaimed Mason.

"Yes," replied Ted. "And do you know what he has come for? He wants to make it up."

There was a long silence. Mr. Goff, losing all his bitterness in the feud, took fresh heart. The episode was mysterious, unexpected; but, at any rate, there was now no danger of public disgrace, no fear of being branded at petty sessions as a purloiner of steaks.

Ted looked at his father's face. It really seemed promising.

"You see," said Ted, "he's rather timid about coming to you. He thinks you'll only be nasty about it. That's why I locked him in—so he wouldn't have a chance to run away and change his mind."

"You let him out!" said Mason heartily.

Ted unlocked the door, and Goff, shamefaced enough, stepped out. Mason put out his hand, and the friendship of thirty years was recalled by the pressure of palms.

"Well, upon my word, you're a beauty!" exploded Mr. Porter, half an hour later. "You keeps me waiting an hour while you fetch a steak, and then you come back without it!"

"Met an old friend," said Goff unsteadily. "Soon put it straight, though. Annabel, run up to Mason's and get a steak. Yes," he added, in reply to Mrs. Goff's unspoken question; "that's all right."

And so the feud ended almost as suddenly as it had begun. Goff and Mason are again the greatest of friends, and Annabel and Ted are—well, something more.—London Answers.

"I say," cried the business man to the detective, "some fellow has been representing himself as a collector of ours. He has been getting in more money than any two of the men we have, and I want him caught as quickly as you can."

"All right; I'll have him in gaol in less than a week."

"Great Scott, man! I don't want to put him in gaol, I want to engage him!"

YOUNG FOLKS

THE TREE AND THE TABLE.

"See, Aunt Ethel, this table is like a funny sort of a looking-glass," said little Mary Harris, turning her head this way and that over the little round mahogany table in Grandma Harris's sitting-room. "It makes my face look as big as a moon. What makes this table shine so?"

"It shines because grandmother rubs it every day with a piece of soft cloth," declared Constance.

"Well, the kitchen table doesn't shine," objected Mary, "and I see Ellen scrub it and scrub it."

"The kitchen table is made of pine, dear, and this table is of mahogany," explained Aunt Ethel, "and mahogany is a hard wood; the more you rub it the better it is; but pine is soft wood, and will not shine."

"But both these tables were trees once," said Mary. "Aunt Ethel, can't you tell us a lovely story about the kitchen table?"

"Begin when it was a tree in the forest," urged Constance.

Aunt Ethel took off her thimble and folded up her work. "I can tell you more about the kitchen table than I can about the mahogany," she answered, with the pretty smile which her small nieces always liked to see, "because the kitchen table was made from a tall pine-tree which grew in the forest. Small birds built their homes in its branches, and little squirrels ran up and down the smooth trunk."

"One day a man came through the woods with a sharp axe. He looked at the tall trees, and sighed a little as he decided that they must be cut down. But he went to work with his axe, and in a short time the largest and best of the trees lay on the ground. The man trimmed off the branches, and then a yoke of big, strong oxen came up through the wood-road and pulled the logs down to the bank of a river."

"What river?" questioned Mary.

"The Ottawa River, in Ontario," replied Aunt Ethel, "and our pine-tree went down the stream with many other logs; and at last it was drawn ashore near a saw-mill. It lay in the yard of the saw-mill for several weeks, and then it was carried into the mill and sharp saws cut it into smooth planks, and the planks were piled up in the yard to season; that is, to dry until they were just right to use to finish houses with, or to make into chairs and tables."

"One day a carpenter came along, looking for a nice, smooth piece of pine to make a table of. And he picked out a plank from the tall pine-tree which had grown in the forest, and had sailed for miles down the beautiful river, and was now seasoned enough to be made into useful articles."

"No machine-made tables for Mrs. Harris," said this carpenter; and he had the planks carried to his shop. And he sawed and planed and cut the smooth wood into the right shape for a good, firm kitchen table, with a big drawer to keep spoons and knives in. When it was all finished, he brought it to Grandma Harris's kitchen, and

MODERN SAFE-BUILDING

PLACE WHERE $500,000,000 IS STORED.

Burglar-Proof Safe Capable of Resisting Flood, Fire or Earthquake.

There is a crib waiting to be cracked at Washington which will place Bill Sikes on his mettle. He will, in fact, need the skill and ingenuity of half a dozen Raffles to break through the barriers between him and $500,000,000 which lies in the vault of the Treasury Building in Washington, says London Tit-Bits. This money is "kept in stock" in accordance with the Emergency Currency Act, which was passed by the United States Congress last year, and the man who is responsible for its safe keeping is Mr. Watson W. E. Eldridge, whose official position is that of Chief of the Currency Bureau.

While his responsibility is great, however, it is mitigated to a certain extent by the fact that this emergency money has been stored in a safe or vault which is not only burglar proof, but capable of resisting flood, fire, or earthquake. When the Bureau of Printing and Engraving began to deliver the emergency money—not in thousands and hundreds of thousands, but in millions—the Treasury officials ordered a safe capable of holding this, the vastest sum of money ever stored in one place.

COST $45,000.

The vault was completed a short time ago, and to-day contains hundreds of millions of banknotes stored in its steel pigeon holes. The safe itself costs $45,000, and is a two-storey structure. The interior walls are of Harveyized steel, half an inch thick, the whole being encased in masonry and cement more than 2 feet thick.

Beneath the masonry and the shell of steel lies the chief protection of the vault against burglars—a mat of closely woven steel wires. Each of these wires is charged with electricity, so that when one of them is touched with an awl, or a bit, or a dynamite pump, an alarm is instantly set off in an adjoining building where watchmen are constantly on guard; and to make sure that this electrical apparatus is working properly, there is a "buzzer" which goes off every fifteen minutes inside the vault.

AN AMAZING DOOR.

If the warning apparatus is not working properly, this "buzzer" will be thrown out of commission and the watchman will be immediately notified. This enormous vault, whose roof is on a level with the pavement, has a perfect system of ventilation by great driving and suction fans, which are turned on when the vault is opened so that the air is fresh and cool at all times.

One of the marvels of the vault is the door, a complicated mass of grey steel weighing seven tons, but so wonderfully balanced on ball-bearing hinges that it can be opened without effort. It has four combinations, and no one man in the employ of the Government knows them. Two men know two of them.

EMPRESS OF THE PAST

EUGENIE TALKS TO A NEWS-PAPER MAN.

"I Am the Past—I Live Only in My Youth and I Wish to be Forgotten."

"I have lived; I have been what I have been; I do not ask for more. I ask not to be remembered."

"I am the past. I am the distant horizon where exists a mirage—a shadow, a phantom, a living sorrow."

She spoke, with the infinite grief that possesses her, the Empress Eugenie to an Italian journalist at her Villa Cyrenos, Cap Martin, on the Riviera, recently. She who was the lovely Empress of the French, whose husband died an exile at Chiselhurst, England, whose son, the Prince Imperial, was killed by Zulu assegais; she whose boudoir was entered through the church door, permitted herself to be interviewed, this journalist says.

EIGHTY-FOUR YEARS AGO.

Eighty-four years of age, the once Countess of Montigo broke the reserve which she has nourished and maintained for well nigh forty years.

"Between my past and my present," said the woman who reigned with Napoleon III., "there exists not half a century but ten centuries. Men have changed, times have changed. Men no longer pursue heroic ideals," she added, sighing, as if regretting the gallantry of the Second Empire.

The interviewer remarked that not all the stories of all the court ladies could equal in interest what she could tell of the reign of Napoleon III., the sovereign whom she helped to lift to his height, whom she helped to drag to his fall.

DREAM OVER.

"No," she said wearily, "it is a dream that is dissipated. It was a dream in which, sleeping, I foresaw a great and noble future for the country which took me to its heart as its sovereign. It is a dream which was killed by fate, destiny. Vanishing, I wished to disappear with it. That has been my wish ever since the shadowy fabric of my dream fell apart."

"I am an old woman, poor in everything that makes a woman rich. My husband, my son—that brave boy—they are gone. But I love France; did I not love France so much I might try to forget the mournful memories associated with her."

"Germany," the interviewer began—

"Our race will never die, will never be conquered," exclaimed the Empress, with extraordinary animation. "Our race is everlasting, because it has found, it has formed, because it is immortal because its ideals are great and beautiful."

"But for my part, my eyes no longer turn to the future. I live only in my youth, long past. There is nothing for me but to wait; my dreary winter is nearly over."

BALANCED RATION.

Though the balanced-ration idea may have been pushed too far by extremists, who reduced feeding problems to a basis of mathematical quibbles, while failing to accord due weight to such important, practical points as succulence, a palatability and wholesomeness, nevertheless, it has a solid basis in fact. While nobody knows exactly what is a perfectly-balanced ration for any animal, while the needs of individuals differ, and while other factors enter to complicate the problem, still there is no gainsaying that economy demands attention to the compounding of rations, to insure that they will contain not only a sufficient total amount of digestible nutrients to leave a surplus over maintenance, but that a reasonable proportion of these nutrients shall consist of the indispensable element protein, which enters so largely into the composition of blood, flesh and milk-solids. We have yet to hear of a cow making a great milk record, or of a herd yielding a high yearly average of milk, that was not fed a tolerably well-balanced ration.

Both experiments and everyday feeding practice have demonstrated the wisdom of making reasonable effort to feed approximately balanced rations, purchasing, when necessary, feeds rich in protein, such as bran, oil cake, gluten meal, cottonseed meal, or peas. The writer recalls hearing his grandfather remark once, years ago, long before balanced rations were talked about, that he had never had better results in milk production than when he fed a few peas. He didn't know why, but if he could have consulted Henry, he would have learned that peas contain 16.8 per cent of digestible protein, as compared with about 8 per cent in corn, 8.7 in barley, and 9.2 in oats. Oilcake meal carries 29.3 per cent of digestible protein, and cottonseed meal 37.2 per cent., while wheat bran (a much less concentrated feed) possesses an average of about 12.2 per cent.

As the average ration of farm-grown roughage is more or less deficient in protein, it is usually profitable to purchase feeds containing a high percentage of it, or better still, to supply it by growing clover and alfalfa, the former containing 6.8 per cent of protein, and the latter 11.1 per cent., or about nine-tenths as much as wheat bran. Allowing for the greater percentage of crude fibre, and for the fact that it is not always possible to cure the alfalfa into first-class hay, we are still safe in calling it worth probably three-quarters as much per ton as bran for feeding along with corn silage. Indeed, many dairymen obtain excellent results from corn silage, alfalfa hay, and very little of anything else.

Just by way of convincing skeptical readers that we are not talking or writing "hot air" when advising the use of balanced rations, we append a note received the other day from a Lambton County Subscriber:

"This is the best I have ever written."

lained. Harris, said this carpenter and he had the planks carried to his shop. "And he sawed and planed and cut the smooth wood into the right shape for a good, firm kitchen table, with a big drawer to keep spoons and knives in. When it was all finished, he brought it to Grandma Harris's kitchen, and there it is now."

"What became of the other tall pine-trees that the man with the axe cut down," asked Mary.

"The very tallest pine-tree went sailing way down to where the river empties into the Atlantic Ocean. And it was such a smooth, fine log that a man who built ships saw it, and said, 'There is a fine spar. It will make a good mast for a ship.' So it was drawn ashore, the bark was peeled off, and it was rubbed and polished and worked over until it was a beautiful mast for a big vessel; and now it goes sailing on long voyages. And sometimes a bird will light upon its rigging, as the ropes that hold the sails are called, and all the winds sing about it just as they used to do when it was a tall pine in the forest."

"I suppose the mahogany-tree was cut down and made into planks and then into a table, just the same as the pine," said Mary, thoughtfully, "but what else is done with wood, Aunt Ethel?"

"Lead-pencils are made of wood," declared Constance; "that is, the outside of them are."

"This newspaper is made of wood," said Aunt Ethel, pointing to a folded paper on the mahogany table.

Mary nodded smilingly. "Uncle Jim told us about that once," she said.

"Then we burn up wood, you know," continued Aunt Ethel, "and boxes are made of it, and all sorts of things. As you learn the names of the different trees you will learn what they are used for."

"I am sorry the big pine had to be cut down, but grandma had to have a good kitchen table, so our pine-tree is just as useful in the kitchen as the other one is in the ship."—Youth's Companion.

ORIGINAL FORBIDDEN FRUIT.

Banana May Have Caused Trouble in Eden.

Some people believe that the banana was the original forbidden fruit of the Garden of Eden. In any case, it is one of the curiosities of the vegetable kingdom, being not a tree, a palm, a bush, a shrub, a vegetable or an herb, but a herbaceous plant with the status of a tree. Although it sometimes attains a height of thirty feet, there is no woody fibre in any part of its structure, and the bunches growing on the dwarf banana plant are often heavier than the stalk which supports them. No other plant gives such a quantity of food to the acre as the banana; it yields forty-four times more by weight than the potato and 133 times more than wheat. Moreover, no insect will attack it, and it is always immune from disease of any kind.

THE WATCHMEN'S ROOM.

It is necessary, therefore, to supply the watchman's department with a schedule showing at what hour the vault will be opened. The vault, according to the schedule, must not be opened before 8.45 in the morning, and it must be closed before 5 o'clock every night.

The only way to reach the vault is by a tiny hydraulic elevator, which is protected by an iron door, opening almost at the elbow of the Chief of the Bureau, who keeps the key in his desk.

FACES WITHOUT TRIMMING.

Wear Whiskers and You are Likely to Catch Cold.

A deeply observing person who claims to have discovered that men who wear whiskers or mustaches, are much more liable to catch cold than are the clean-shaven, has inspired the scientifically learned London Lancet to look into the matter.

It is suggested that the habit of daily shaving may prove an antiseptic process which regularly removes pathogenic organisms which otherwise lurk and grow in the beard or mustache. It is, of course, conceivable that the mustache affords a nursery for organisms, especially as it must be moist, and occupies a position close to the breathing intake.

Further, it is reasonable enough to assume that the daily shave does, as a matter of fact, amount to a regular antiseptic routine. The mustache is obviously difficult to clean thoroughly, and it is open to doubt whether mere washing completely sterilizes it. Even if that should be the case, the mustache would soon be full of organisms again, as it is constantly exposed to a stream of air which is rarely sterile.

However, there should be a similar immunity enjoyed by women unless we lay stress on the fact that no method in their toilet amounts to the drastic cleansing process of the razor and soap. Moreover, fine down hair is natural to the lip of women and children.

The observation is an interesting one, and its author sends some confirmation of his view in the shape of details of cases in which the subjects, while regular sufferers from common cold when they were a mustache, seem to have enjoyed a comparative immunity since they have shaved clean.

At any rate here seems to be one more argument in favor of the very modern practise among men of wearing their faces without trimmings.

THE AGILE ESKIMO.

Habit Enables Him to Scale Heights With Surprising Ease

"In all my experience I had never encountered a rougher, more difficult country in which to hunt than in Ellesmere Land," writes Harry Whitney, of Cook-Pearry fame, in Outing. "Ordinarily I should have believed these mountain sides, with walls of smooth rock sheathed with a crust of hard ice and snow, quite unscalable."

"In places they were almost perpendicular. Rarely did they offer a crevice to serve as foot or hand hold, and putting points and firm set boulders were too widely scattered to be of much help."

"In this his native land the Eskimo has a decided advantage over the white hunter. His lifetime of experience has taught him to scale these ice-clad heights with a nimbleness and ease that are astounding. He is quite fearless, and even the mountain sheep is not his superior as a climber."

"As if by magic, and with little apparent effort, the two Eskimos flew up the slippery walls, far outstripping me. How they did it I shall never know. Now and again I was forced to cut steps in the ice or I should inevitably have lost my footing and been hurled downward several hundred feet to the rocks beneath."

"I was astonished even at my own progress, and when I paused momentarily in panic. But there was no turning back and one look robbed me of my desire to try it."

"The Eskimo has no conception of distance. He is endowed with certain artistic instincts which enable him to draw a fairly good map of a coast line with which he is thoroughly familiar, but he cannot tell you how far it is from one point to another. Often when they told me a place where I was bound for was very close at hand it developed that we were far from it. This they are never sure of and cannot indicate."

"The Eskimos have a white man 'stung to death' from every point of view. They not only can go to sleep promptly, but sleep soundly and well as they travel, when circumstances permit. They get sustenance, too, by eating hard frozen walrus and seal meat or blubber. This I could never do, for it is so strong on flavor that it invariably nauseated me, though I did succeed very well with raw hare or deer's meat when I had it."

"Did you ever stop to think, my dear," said Mr. Micawber, gazing at his plate of lobster salad, "that the things we love most in this life are the very things that never agree with us?" "Will you be so kind," said Mrs. Micawber, straightening up, "as to tell me whether you are speaking of the salad or of me, sir?"

Just by way of convincing skeptical readers that we are not talking or writing "hot air" when advising the use of balanced rations, we append a note received the other day from a Lambton County Subscriber. Early in the year he had written us, propounding this query:

"Having on hand abundance of corn, barley and oat straw to feed milch cows, will it pay me to sell the barley and buy bran, in order to have a more balanced ration?" In reply, we advised him to sell the barley and buy bran and oil-cake meal, and suggested a ration devised according to his probable needs. Writing a month or so later, when his cows might naturally be expected to have shrunk in their milk flow, he says:

"I have followed your advice, and, as a consequence, my cows are now giving about ten pounds more milk per day on cheaper feed than they formerly had."—Farmer's Advocate.

WERE FRESH AFTERWARD.

Purveyor of Eggs Was Made to Swallow Some Ancient Ones.

Sir Gilbert Parker, the novelist, who has travelled extensively and acquired a great knowledge of the ways of the world, tells many stories of his experience. One relates to an English officer and himself. At a small post in Egypt they lived practically on eggs and tinned meat, and, as there was nothing else to be had, the eggs were a very important item of the dietary. Day after day the eggs, like those of the oft-quoted curate, were "very good in parts," but one morning they were frankly bad. The officer who had the power of life and death in those parts, determined that the eggs should be fresh in future, so the egg merchant was brought before him. "Open your mouth," said the officer, and the wretched man, standing between two sentries, obeyed, trembling. Slowly and solemnly an evil-smelling egg was poured in. Again the command was given, and again a potential rooster was gulped down. A third followed the other two. After that, whoever else may have had bad eggs palmed off on them, Sir Gilbert Parker and the officer were well served.

CAKE.

Crumb Cake.—Two and one-half cupsful of flour, one and one-half cupsful of sugar, one-half cupful of butter and lard (mixed), one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, cloves, nutmeg, and cinnamon. Use hand and mix the same as pie crust. When well mixed take out scant half cupful of the crumbs, then add two well beaten eggs, one cupful of sour milk, one scant teaspoonful of soda. Beat well. Put in deep square pan and sprinkle crumbs on top. Bake slowly.

Hickory Nut Cake.—One pound of butter, one and one-half pounds of "A" sugar, ten eggs (whole, added one at a time), one pound of sifted flour, one and one-half pounds of seeded raisins, one-fourth pound of citron, one pound of shelled hickory nuts, one grated nutmeg, one-half glass of good whisky.

Prune Cake.—Cream one tablespoonful of butter with four tablespoonfuls of sugar; add grated rind of lemon, one egg beaten lightly, mix all together. Add a cupful of sifted flour, a teaspoonful of baking powder (not full), sift again. Add one-quarter cupful of milk, just to thin. Place dough in pan and on top place lightly prunes which have been pitted and cooked. It usually takes one pound of prunes for one large layer. Whipped cream on top of same makes it delicious. But it can be eaten without.

Nut Cake.—Cream one cupful of granulated sugar with one-half cupful of butter, then stir in the well beaten yolks of three eggs and one-fourth cupful of milk. Have sifted together one and one-half cupsful of flour with one-half teaspoonful of baking soda and two level teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, and add to the other ingredients, then flavor with one teaspoonful of lemon extract or the grated rind of one lemon, then stir in one cup of coconut and one-half cupful of sliced citron; last stir in the beaten whites of two eggs. Bake in moderate oven. Iceing.—Boil one cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of water till it forms a soft ball when dropped in cold water; while hot gradually pour over the beaten white of an egg, add one-half teaspoonful of vanilla and one cupful of coconut. Spread on cake.

German Cherry Cake.—As prepared by a German chef: Three cupsful of red sour cherries (canned), one cupful of flour, six tablespoonfuls of sugar, the yolks of two eggs, one-quarter of a cupful of milk, one tablespoonful of butter, one-half teaspoonful of baking powder and one-quarter of a teaspoonful of salt (all level measures are used). Sift the flour, salt, and baking powder and two teaspoonfuls of the sugar into a bowl, then rub in the butter. Beat the yolks of the eggs, add to them the milk and quickly mix the liquid through the flour. Shape with the hand, into a greased pan, one-eighth of an inch thick. Drain cherries, spread them over the dough and sprinkle over them the remaining sugar. Bake twenty minutes, in a brisk Pressing Form.—A good form for pressing waists, coats, and hips of skirts—Get a sawdust ham from meat market, cover with outing flannel. It gives the round curve required.

Curtain Help.—When making a curtain to hang up to a cupboard or war robe stitch a piece of tape or goods of same across the wrong side of the gathers and let end of tape extend out at each end of curtain and run through a small brass ring, and sew. Your curtain is always ready to hang up when laundered and saves time and bother of stopping to insert a string or wire.

Skirt Braid.—An easy way to put on a new skirt braid is to insert a piece of thin cardboard (an old calling card is best to use) in the hem of the skirt and run it along as you sew on the braid. This will help you to work quickly and prevent the stitches from showing on the outside of the hem.

Wall Pockets.—Take a large piece of strong material to fit a suitable space on the wall near the sewing machine or elsewhere and there on sew a series of gathered pockets of large and small sizes to suit different needs such as for darning materials, patterns, darning to be done and odd materials for mending. Tack this against the wall and it will always be handy and things be in place and out of the way. Use gathered pockets because they hold more and will not tear as a straight pocket would.

Darning.—Before wearing, carefully weave heels and toes of new stockings as if a hole were there and reinforce any weak places. You will be surprised at the amount of wear you get out of those hose. Boys' stockings will wear again as long if you will sew a tack at ankle before wearing. When knee shows signs of wear, rip out the tack and worn part is raised high enough to come under trousers. Wash new stockings before wearing and they will last longer. You can easily darn a large hole if you baste a piece of netting over it, weaving back and forth through the meshes, then up and down. When finished draw out threads of netting. Work will not pucker.

CLEANING.

Rugs.—Take a stiff scrubbing brush and brush rugs as you would a piece of cloth. This can be done on the floor and will take out practically all the dirt and will make much less dust than the broom. It will also save the rug many a hard beating, thus lengthening its usefulness.

Gloves.—To clean white kid gloves, take two bowls of gasoline and in a small portion in one put in enough flour to make a thin paste, then put gloves on the hands and wash, of course rubbing the badly soiled places most. When they are clean, put in the bowl of clear gasoline and wash out and dry. All flour that might remain can be brushed off when dry. Try this, do not use where there is gas or a fire.

WARFARE MORE HUMANE

RULES OF NATIONS ARE DESIGNED TO THAT END.

Mere Useless Mining and Infliction of Avoidable Suffering are Forbidden.

Although the actual means of destruction have grown more deadly, a scientific discovery is constantly adding new explosives to those already known, almost all known military laws are framed with the object of protecting, and, if possible, preserving human life. The tendency of civilized warfare at the present day is to avoid useless slaughter and mere destruction for its own sake. When it comes to actual campaigning, military law forbids certain easy and effective methods of getting rid of an enemy. If the enemy is encamped, his water supply may be cut off, but it is forbidden to poison springs, wells, streams or reservoirs. In the war between China and Japan the Japanese troops during their advance through Korea did not use the old village wells, but substituted for them tube wells and other methods of obtaining a reliable supply of pure water. This was done because their commanding officers had been warned that the Chinese might poison the wells, says the Philadelphia Record.

The laws of war, as set forth by various international conventions and accepted by civilized nations, also forbid mere useless maiming and the infliction of avoidable suffering. For this reason the use of the explosive rifle bullet is forbidden. In other words, it is legitimate warfare to inflict a bullet wound that will disable a man, or perhaps kill him, but it must not be done in a manner that will cause and intense suffering before death. In the earlier engagements of the Spanish-American war it was believed that the Spaniards were using explosive bullets, and, until the falsity of the charge was proved, great indignation was expressed throughout the world.

In this principle there has followed a tacit understanding among civilized nations not to use soft nosed, collapsible bullets that mushroom when they reach their mark. This form of bullet is now used against big game, but not against human beings. During the South African War general orders forbade the English troops the use of the Dumdum rifle bullet and a type of enlarging pistol bullet. But there seems to be a tendency to use these ugly missiles against savage foes. The reason for making this distinction is that while the more or less educated civilized soldier when struck even by a small bullet, becomes nervously anxious to have his wound attended to by a surgeon at once, the uneducated barbarian, on the other hand, having no nerves to bother him and no knowledge of anatomy, will come on and get to close quarters even after two or three of these small bullets have gone through his body. This is not only true of the fanatical followers of the Mahdi, or of other savage races of Africa; the same thing has recently been observed among the battleship to 1,000 feet and the velocity of the falling shell would be increased to 254 feet per second. At a height of 5,000 feet, which many experts seem to regard as the limit for practical warfare, the velocity of the shell would become 567 feet per second. The destructive force of such a blow can readily be conceived.

Here, too, military law will have to contend with the powerful destructive forces brought into play by modern scientific invention. But the ablest writers on the art of war already perceive that the formidable character of the airship is greatly limited by its lack of carrying power. Its ammunition will always have to be sparingly used, and it must always manoeuvre with the knowledge that its supply of fuel may be exhausted at any moment. Destruction for the mere sake of destruction, as so luridly pictured by H. G. Wells and other military writers, can never form a part of the war in the air, even if new international laws should not render it impossible.

WORD BLINDNESS.

A Curious Occasional Broken Function of the Mind.

It is scarcely open to question that all education should be individual, but unfortunately this requirement cannot be met in our crowded schools. The State is compelled to require a definite amount of knowledge from all engaged in the same course, says the Scientific American. The difficulties to which this may give rise are illustrated by the following stories of pupils, who despite earnest endeavor could never learn to write correctly, or to read fluently, or to pass the examinations provided for the lowest classes, although some of them are able to accomplish important scientific work. A perfectly healthy 15-year-old girl, one of the best pupils of the highest class of a German school, could not spell correctly either German or foreign words, either from dictation or from memory. She could write single characters perfectly; she could also read a single series of musical notes, and play the violin by note, but she could not read piano music. The difficulty was that she was unable to impress the picture of the word on her memory. By the employment of a great number of aids to memory she succeeded in making much progress, but she continued to make the most incredible errors in writing, which sharply contrasted with the general excellence of her work at school. She could not read fluently, because the image of the word was not present to her memory.

The girl's grandmother, a highly educated woman, her great-uncle and a son of the latter exhibited the same defects. Each of the men wrote a number of scientific works, but the spelling had to be corrected by others.

In this case, therefore, this same defect, which the English call "word blindness," appeared in four members of one family. As we know that the brain contains a special centre for the memory of words, we must conclude that the entire absence of this elementary faculty in persons otherwise of good mental equipment, must be caused by a defect of this small part of the brain. As such persons cannot satisfy the requirements exacted in the

CHICKEN RECIPES.

Chicken Biscuit.—There is more taste in a yearling hen than in a chicken, but many people prefer the latter. In any case, only a fat hen or chicken should be used, as a thin chicken is almost tasteless. If a rich gravy is not liked a part of the fat may be removed before cooking. The chicken should be cleaned, unpointed, and placed over the fire with water to cover. It should be skinned. Add more water from time to time, cook until tender, season with salt and pepper while it is cooking. One hour before the chicken is to be served, make a rich biscuit dough as follows: Take one quart sifted flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one half teaspoonful of salt, and sift again. Work in one heaping tablespoonful of lard. Moistened with sweet milk. Roll out into a sheet one inch thick and cut with a biscuit cutter. Bake in a moderately hot oven until a golden brown. Thicken the chicken gravy, break the hot biscuits into halves, and drop them in to remain for two minutes, and serve with the chicken in a large tureen.

Chicken Mousse.—One tablespoonful of gelatine, one quarter cupful cold chicken stock, three quarters cupful hot chicken stock, highly seasoned, one cupful of heavy cream, one cupful of cold cooked chicken, cut in small pieces, salt and pepper. Soak gelatine in cold stock, dissolve in hot stock and strain. When mixture begins to thicken beat, using an egg beater, until frothy, then add cream, beat it stiff, and chicken. Add more salt and pepper if necessary. Turn out, baking powder or cocoa dust, dip in cold water, then drain. When ready to serve, turn pieces from molds, cut in one inch slices and arrange on lettuce leaves. Serve with mayonnaise dressing. If a more elaborate dish is liked, surround with chopped celery and salad mix, mixed with a mayonnaise dressing. This is particularly fine.

THE SEWIN GROOM.

Old Ticking.—If you have a discarded mattress ticking rip it apart, cut and sew as for carpet rags, and have woven with white warp. Have a border at each end of plain rags to match.

To Darn Matting.—If matting is worn in the center it may be darned to look as good as new by threading a darning needle with raffia and darning it as you would a stocking. If the worn part is on the edge buttonhole stitch the last row as a border and it will not fray. If raffia is not fine enough split it to suit. Raffia comes in about three colors—natural, red, and blue. Natural colored raffia is about the same color as matting and is cheap.

paste, then put gloves on the hands and wash, of course rubbing the badly soiled places most. When they are clean, put in the bowl of clear gasoline and wash out and dry. All flour that might remain can be brushed off when dry. Try this, do not use where there is gas or a fire.

Fine Lace.—Make a soft, wet paste of gasoline and flour. Rub the lace in this paste gently until clean. Shake and it will be like new. Press after exposure to the air. Also fine for kid gloves, silk and net wasters in light colors. If spotted, use little borax in paste. They will keep clean much longer than when gasoline alone is used.

MAULED BY A LION.

An African Explorer's Experience With the King of Beasts.

A story of another addition to the long list of hunters injured by lions comes from British East Africa, and is printed in Forest and Stream. The account of the injury to Mr. Harry Williams, the African explorer, is given by the victim as follows:

On June 8th I was out alone, having only my two gun-bearers with me, when I saw a lion on the right, about three hundred yards away. I put up my hand as a signal to my head gun-bearer to come up with a spare rifle, and together we worked closer and closer to the lion. The beast seemed to have no intention of stopping, so I struck one hand on the back of the other. The lion seemed to decide upon retreat, for he turned and trotted away.

I fired both barrels of my four hundred and fifty at him. One shot reached him in the flank. It was only a slight flesh wound, but it paralyzed him for the moment, and he sat down on his haunches like a dog. After a few minutes he got up and went into a bit of open bush.

Not knowing what state the brute might be in, I made for a big open patch on my left, hoping to get a better sight of him. The lion, however, had been watching me, and now came straight at me at a trotting pace.

I thought myself a dead man, but with the courage born of despair, I raised my rifle in both hands and struck him across the side of the head. Almost simultaneously he ducked and seized me by the right leg, snaking me from side to side as if I had been a rat.

At that moment my gun-bearer came up while the lion was actually mauling me, shoved the rifle he carried down to me, and asked me how to turn the safety-catch. I had sufficient presence of mind to be able to explain in a second, and the gun-bearer fired.

The lion left me and rushed into a bush five yards away, giving me time to put two cartridges in my rifle while I still lay on the ground.

Raising myself to fire, I saw that the lion was in the act of springing. I fired both barrels from my hip at his head, the "boy" firing at the same time, and the brute rolled over dead.

I fell back again, and for a few moments half-swooned; but as soon as the second gun-bearer came up I sent him off to find camp, and bring back some men to carry me. For an hour I lay there, and then half the camp turned up, and I was carried in on a bed. I shall never forget the agony of that journey.

to bother him and no knowledge of anatomy, will come on and get to close quarters even after two or three of these small bullets have gone through his body. This is not only true of the fanatical followers of the Mahdi, or of other savage races of Africa; the same thing has recently been observed among the tribes of the Philippine Islands, where bow and spear men advanced steadily in the face of the fire from the American rifles.

EXPLOSIVE BULLETS

being forbidden, a lower limit has to be set to the use of projectiles that carry a bursting charge. No shell must weigh less than half a kilogramme—that is, roughly calculated, a pound. As a result, the smallest shell now used is the little one-inch steel bomb intended for the pom-pom. These small shells are fired in sets of ten, and they explode one after the other like a string of Chinese firecrackers. During the Boer War, when they were constantly used, they inflicted comparatively few casualties, but they seemed to shatter the men's nerves. This is the effect that Major Muedebek, the German military expert, believes that the occasional dropping a small bomb from an airship will have upon the enemy. It will not be thrown with the object of destroying the lives of the men in the ranks, but merely with the hope that it will unnerve them and thus reduce both their powers of endurance and their fighting strength.

The prohibition against small explosive projectiles has not yet been extended, however, to the grenades filled with high explosives, which were introduced by the Japanese during their war with Russia. They were used in storming entrenchments, and were fired from portable wooden mortars which two men could run up with to the firing line. They are said to have produced hideous injuries, and those they did not kill outright. It may be generally known that the English military authorities have adopted the idea, and that experiments have recently been made at Woolwich with high explosive grenades and portable mortars.

It aerial warfare becomes an established fact it will become necessary to frame new laws governing the character of the explosives to be used by these strange craft, and the exact conditions under which they will be justified in shelling a city or fortified position of any kind. It is obvious, however, that the airship offers unique possibilities for the discharge of explosive, fire producing or poisonous gas bombs over a large area. Enormous destruction could be wrought by these, and the gas bombs, exhaling poisonous vapors, would render a whole district practically untenable by troops. These gas bombs will probably be allowed by international agreement on the ground that they are preventive rather than actively destructive in character.

The velocity acquired by bombs when dropped from great heights would also give them enormous striking power. A shell dropped from an airship or aeroplane 500 feet above the earth would have a velocity of know that the brain contains a special centre for the memory of words, we must conclude that the entire absence of this elementary faculty in persons otherwise of good mental equipment, must be caused by a defect of this small part of the brain. As such persons cannot satisfy the requirements exacted in the lowest classes, they are in danger of never reaching the higher ones. In London one case of word blindness was found among each two thousand school children. With proper appreciation of the conditions, it should be possible to carry on the education of such a child if otherwise intelligent. This, however, cannot be done by the school; it must be accomplished by the parents or by benevolent societies.

ADVERTISE THEIR LOVE.

Curious Appeals in the Newspapers of Southern Italy.

The printed love letters in the advertising columns of papers in southern Italy fill the tourist with wonder, mingled with deep respect for the sentiment which will pay for their insertion. The following letter, taken from the Palermo Ora contained 174 words, which at the advertised rate would cost $1.74. If the Italian saying, "a lira is a dollar," is true this would equal a bill of $85.70, which would require a pretty devoted American lover to pay.

Dearest Little One: What have I done to thee? Why this silence after thy promise? I experience from it a grief so violent that it renders me helpless.

Thou art good, my Santuzza, as good as dear; thou knowest how this makes me suffer. Why dost thou do it? Thou knowest how I love thee, that thou art my religion. Have I offended thee?

I seek intense occupation to keep me calm, but a thousand thoughts gnaw my soul. Perhaps while you amuse yourself you do not know how your silence agitates me. O dear Madonna mine, darling, darling, my blessed joy, do not forget me, thou art my life, all there is for me, my good Santuzza.

I could not longer live without thee. Forgive me if I have offended thee in any way, blessed little bird. Here all is as if thou wert to arrive at any moment. I seek to create for myself this most beautiful illusion, ever speaking to thee, vainly expecting news from thee with every post, with a violently beating heart.

Do not believe me bad; I love thee so much; I kiss thy dear lips, thy most entrancing little countenance, all infinite passion and tenderness. I am insane to hear once more thy dear, enchanting voice.

There were eleven letters of this kind in the same issue of the Ora, about an average number for a Palermo paper. Such letters are found in all Italian papers, but they get shorter and shorter as you travel north until in Milan one line in the "agony column" suffices to express the lover's anguish.

A style which seems theatrical to an American seems perfectly natural to an Italian. He will write exactly this sort of love letter in private.

TRAGEDIES IN BERLIN

A REGULAR EPIDEMIO IN THE GERMAN CAPITAL.

So Common Since the First of the Year That Papers Almost Ignore Them.

Suicide Town is the new name of the two districts of Berlin (Germany) around the great railway stations. Mostly these quarters are made up of boarding and third-class, and in them since the end of December there has been an unbroken succession of suicides and murder. Berlin papers now dismiss these cases with small paragraphs, because they have become too common.

It is difficult, say the police, to account for this sudden popularity of Berlin as a place of final abode for people tired of life. Police supervision of hotels is sharp and landlords are keenly alive to the disadvantages of having their hotels brought under the notice of the police as refuges for errand wives or weak-minded shop-girls, who flee with other women's husbands and put an end to themselves when the money runs short.

FINANCIAL TROUBLES.

Some of the instances of self-destruction seem to point to growing financial difficulties in the way of couples getting married in Germany. A sixteen-year-old girl named Frida Finke, the daughter of fairly well-to-do parents in a suburb, destroyed herself with lysol this week in the company of an eighteen-year-old workman named George Lier. Want of money seems to have been the difficulty, for the parents were ready to consent to an engagement as soon as the young man had obtained a sufficiently permanent and paying job. But the couple could not wait, and preferred to take poison together.

A CRAZY PAIR.

There are, of course, a number of cases in which girls have committed suicide with their lovers owing to the inability of the latter to obtain divorces from their wives. A Hanover engineer arrived at a hotel in Suicide Town a few days ago with a young woman whom he represented as his wife. In the morning the man called a waitress hurriedly and told her to fetch a doctor as his wife was ill. When the doctor arrived he found the girl, a student at a high school, dead and the man just expiring. They had poisoned themselves with morphine and opium.

Then, too, there have been far too many suicides of soldiers since the New Year. On one day last week the papers recorded four cases in which soldiers (one a lieutenant of reserve) had shot themselves, two cases in which soldiers had taken poison and two in which men had drowned themselves.

ALL SORTS OF CAUSES.

It is practically impossible to record most of the cases in detail because they would be an outcry. Love affairs, financial distress and want of employment are the usual explanations, but it is believed that in very many cases the weather is responsible. ## FIGHT WITH CROCODILE

STORY OF AN OLD SAILOR'S DETERMINATION.

Put Both Thumbs Into the Reptile's Eye Sockets, and Thus Saved His Life.

It is only a few months since the incidents happened that I am about to relate, writes A. Cavendish in Chambers's Journal. My work took me on a visit up a river to one of those timber cutting camps where are felled and rafted the great hardwood logs so valued in the Chinese market.

G., the white man in charge, was a characteristic old "hard case," who had started life before the mast in a sailing ship and drifted in a beach combing fashion to our colony, where he had been given, almost in charity, a subordinate billet in one of the large timber companies. Arriving in my boat at the little jetty or landing stage, I was astonished to find G. lying on a rattan couch within a few paces of the bank with a heavy express rifle across his knees gazing intently at a rough pagar or fence erected in the stream.

Hanging from the fence and a few feet above the water were the corpses of a monkey and several pariah dogs; while half a dozen ducks, each tied to the fence by the leg with a long string, flapped about on the water and quacked dismally in their efforts to escape. I was just wondering whether the whiskey bottle or too much solitude accounted for this state of affairs, when I noticed that G.'s leg was swathed in rough bandages from knee to ankle.

Throwing myself down near him in the welcome shade, I learned

THE FOLLOWING STORY:

Two nights before G. was sleeping peacefully in his little palm leaf house in a clearing about twenty yards from the river bank when his dog began to growl and refused to be silenced. G. turned out and walked round the hut to ascertain the cause of the disturbance, but seeing nothing addressed himself to the dog in his usual lurid and picturesque sailing ship language and retired to bed again. Five minutes later he was once more aroused by a yell from the dog, and this time really annoyed, he seized a stick and sallied forth to inflict dire punishment on the disturber of his dreams. Suddenly a dark form glided swiftly from the shadows and G. felt himself seized by the right knee as in a vise.

Stooping to free himself, he found he was in the grip of a large crocodile, whose teeth were firmly embedded in flesh and bone. Backward and forward the struggle swayed, the crocodile striving to pull its destined victim to the water's edge and G., hampered as he was by his imprisoned leg, fighting for his life to reach higher ground. At last the beast, hurling its victim to the ground with a shake of its powerful head, began to draw him swiftly toward the water. Poor G., feeling, as he expressed it, that it was "all over bar the shoutin'," determined to make

QUEER CASES IN LAW

NICE POINTS DECIDED BY THE ENGLISH COURTS.

Cats and Canaries—Dog's Right to a First Bite, and the Hen's Magna Charta.

Every now and again a case crops up in the English law courts which illustrates how the law of that country is a gradual growth built up of decisions and precedents and how far divorced from common sense it often is. One of these which has just been decided by the Court of Appeal will probably form a precedent for many years to come.

Somewhere in the west of England, a farmer owned a field and a vicious horse. The field lay beside the railway station, and for years it has been the custom of the people in the neighborhood to cross it as a short cut going to or from the station. People also used it as a short cut to the farmer's house to buy milk. The farmer never objected, but the use had not been long enough to constitute the path across the field a legal right of way. One day the farmer turned the vicious horse out in the field and the same evening an old man who was crossing it, as he had done for years, was attacked and badly bitten and kicked. He sued the farmer and the lower court gave a verdict for damages in his favor, which seemed to be

THE NATURAL THING TO DO.

The farmer, however, carried the case to the Court of Appeal, which has just ruled that although the farmer knew the horse to be vicious he had no responsibility to the public which he had allowed to use the path across his field, because he had not extended to it an express invitation to do so.

Under a similar decision a dog in England has an established right to a first bite, and is not liable to death for it, nor is his owner liable for damages. The theory is that an owner cannot know that a dog is vicious until he has actually bitten someone, and that as far as the dog is concerned it is fair to assume that he had good reason for the first bite. If he bites again he may fairly be assumed to be dangerous and the courts may order him to be destroyed. Lawyers will tell you that the first bite theory is unsound law and that if you can prove that the owner knew his beast to be vicious, you can recover damage for your lacerated clothes, person and feelings, but in practice the courts always apply the first bite rule.

The House of Lords solemnly decided some years ago that a hen in England had the right to cross a road. The case arose out of an accident to a cyclist and had a bad spill in consequence. The cyclist sued the owner of the hen, who happened to be wealthy, and his case was taken up by a cycling association. The lower court gave him damage on the theory that the hen was in a similar class with a cow, which has no right to cross a road, although she may graze along the side of it, unless she has someone in charge of her. There was no one in charge of the hen, and, therefore, the lower court held has been the City-Corporation of London for over $500,000, having proved a failure for market purposes, it is proposed to appropriate a portion of the site for a public recreation ground or gardens.

WHO RAN INTO A HEN

RIKKI-TIK AND THE COBRA.

A Fight in Which the Mongoose Killed the Big Snake.

"I had the good fortune this evening," says a writer in the Ceylon Times, "to witness a fight between a four foot cobra di capella and a mongoose."

"On first catching sight of the cobra, rikki tik (as Rudyard Kipling calls the Indian mongoose) quietly smelt its tail and then hung around awaiting events with curiosity, but he had not long to wait, for the cobra spread its hood, hissed out its death sentence and prepared to dart from its coil at its natural and hated enemy."

"Now commenced a most interesting and deadly battle—of feint and counter feint by the mongoose and strike and lightninglike recovery by his adversary, who was also on the defensive, all the time watching for the opportunity to get in his properly aimed bite."

"Time after time rikki tik squirmed slowly up to within reach of those terrible fangs—belly on ground—with every gray hair of his body erect with anger and excitement, his eyes glaring from his head, which, by the way, he invariably held sideways during this approach and attack, but the moment the cobra struck in a flash back sprang master mongoose, and although often it appeared as if impossible that he could have escaped the dreaded fangs not a scratch harmed him, and there he would be again, wearing the cobra out and pressing his advantage inch by inch."

"At last with a growl and sharp rikki cry the plucky little beast flew in, avoided the strike and seized the snake behind the head, never for a moment getting under its mouth, but right at the nape of the neck and head, which he scrunched with a loud cracking sound despite the struggles and twisting and turning of the cobra. Again and again rikki returned to the now writhing reptile and bit its head and body until it lay dying."

"Finally he ate three or four inches of his mortal foe, but carefully avoided eating the fangs and poison glands, which I picked up by a stick and found them broken, but with the venom sacks attached. Contrary to popular belief I am of opinion, the mongoose is not immune from snake poison, else why should he so particularly avoid being bitten? It is only by his marvellous activity that he escapes the spring and darting strike of his deadly enemy the cobra di capella."

WORTHY OF NOTE.

Boldly ventured is half won.

To be happy, you must forget yourself.

Whatever else you do with a worry don't pass it on.

Benevolence is the only cure for a morbid temper.

Don't hold your head so high that you can't see where your feet are going.

No quarrelsome man ever made a success of any important or worthy undertaking.

ALL SORTS OF CAUSES.

It is practically impossible to record most of the cases in detail because they would be an outcry. Love affairs, financial distress and want of employment are the usual explanations, but it is believed that in very many cases the weather is responsible. Instead of the bright clear weather which Northern Germany usually enjoys in January there has been an unending succession of damp, muggy days, dark and gloomy mornings and cheerless evenings.

The result, say some Berlin doctors, has been to upset minds already excited by love affairs or the like and to drive the victims to madness and suicide.

THE MEN THAT GET ON.

Those Not Afraid; But Your Courage Must be Mixed With Brains.

"Some men," said a business manager, "are afraid of responsibility, some men welcome it; either sort of man may be good and useful or bad and harmful, according to his special development."

"There are timid men who need somebody always to lean upon but who under guidance are faithful and effective workers; and then there are men afraid of responsibility who are always irresolute and ineffective, who never can be prodded into anything but the dulllest of dull routine work and who must always stay down close to the ground, men of small account."

"Then among men not afraid to take responsibility you find some who are too cocksure about it, ready to settle any question that comes up to them right off the bat, big or little, going ahead jauntily, slapdash; not a good sort of man this to have at a responsible post."

"Also you have the man not afraid who thrives on responsibility and enjoys the increase of power, but who is cool and clear headed, a man of keen and true discernment who knows instinctively and logically what is the right thing to do and then fearlessly goes ahead and does it, a man of brains and courage. A rare combination this, and the man that possesses it gets far."

"For courage is the manly attribute that men most admire; we'd all dearly love to be courageous, to dare; and the man of courage plus brains, the man not afraid to take the responsibility and who has also the downright ability to make good we cotton to, and him most of us are willing to follow and obey. He can have what he wants in this world, and if he should want it he can have the biggest pair of wings in the world to come."

"If you expect to get anywhere don't be afraid to take the responsibility! But really to get on you want to mix your courage with brains."

THE NEW SPELLING.

"Hobson," said Muggins, "they tell me you've taken your boy away from the school. What's that for?"

"Cause," said Hobson, "the master ain't fit to teach 'im."

"Oh," said Muggins, "I've heard he's a very good master."

"Well," replied Hobson, apologetically, "all I know is he wanted to teach my boy to spell 'taters' with a 'p.'" ing for his life to reach higher ground. At last the beast, hurling its victim to the ground with a shake of its powerful head, began to draw him swiftly toward the water. Poor G. feeling, as he expressed it, that it was "all over bar the shoutin'" determined to make for his life, and taking advantage of a momentary halt as the brute was steering past a tree stump, he sat up and succeeded in getting both his thumbs into the reptile's eye sockets, the only vulnerable part of a crocodile's head.

The rest of the story is perhaps best told in G's own words, or as nearly as circumstances (and the editor) will permit: "So soon as I gets me thumbs made fast in 'is eyes 'e opens 'is mouth to shout an' lets go my leg. Then first thing next mornin' the coolies lays 'is breakfast for 'm, as you see, an' I gets into this chair, an' 'ere I stays if it's a month." Vainly I tried to persuade G. to come away with me to the next station and see a doctor. I argued with him, I implored him, but it was absolutely useless. He refused to move from that chair till he had bagged his crocodile, and I was at last obliged to leave him, having dressed his leg and exhausted every known means of persuasion short of brute force.

I met him again a week later in a hospital bed suffering severely, but quite happy in the knowledge that the bones of that crocodile were bleaching in the sun outside his house. Poor old G.! Only a few weeks afterward the habit of clearing creepers from his path in the jungle with the butt end of his loaded and cocked rifle proved fatal to him.

ONE THING AT A TIME.

"Look here, doctor, how much are you going to charge me for this operation?"

"Oh, you've got enough to worry you now without facing that."

"What's that about the cat family?"—Life.

Teacher—"I would like someone in the class to define the meaning of vice versa." Bright Boy—"It's sleeping with your feet towards the head of the bed."

A man should always bear in mind that at least six other men have their eyes on his opportunity.

Too many people gaze through the back window of discontent, while the front door of promise stands open.

Man—"Well, it's just this way. If I buy you a new coat, I'll have to wear my old one another season." Wife—"You sweet, generous thing, you."

hen, who happened to be wealthy, and his case was taken up by a cycling association. The lower court gave him damage on the theory that the hen was in a similar class with a cow, which has no right to cross a road, although she may graze along the side of it, unless she has someone in charge of her. There was no one in charge of the hen, and, therefore, the lower court held that the owner was at fault for allowing a wild beast to stray at large unattended. The Court of Appeal sustained the lower court. But the House of Lords ruled against them both, holding that a hen was not a beast, but a bird, and, therefore, not amenable to its owner's control. This decision has been called the hen's magna charta.

A somewhat similar decision was given some time ago by one of the higher courts on the rights of pigs. This time the law was set in motion by a motorist who was badly hurt and had his car wrecked by running into an elderly woman's pig, which was asleep in the middle of the road on a summer afternoon. The case was fought bitterly by eminent counsel on both sides, and the right of the pig to sit down on the road was vindicated. The evidence that she was not asleep, although the motorist stoutly contended that she was, was somewhat shaky, so the case turned on the pig's right to sit down on the road. The court decided that a pig had as much right as a man—or a motorist—to travel on the king's highway, and that the right to travel implied the right to rest. The decision was hailed with joy.

BY ALL ROAD HOGS.

A cat's right to eat a canary has also been ruled on by the courts. In the case which now forms the precedent for the law of cats and canaries a cat belonging to one maiden woman jumped through the open window of the house next door, which belonged to another maiden woman, who didn't like cats, but who loved canaries. She kept half a dozen of the little yellow birds and allowed them to fly freely about the house. The cat ate two before the mistress of the canaries came to the rescue, and, of course, a lawsuit followed. Law-suits always do follow in England no matter how trifling the damage may have been. The decision in this case was that as the cat was a wild animal, not—like a dog—being amenable to discipline, and that as the canaries were not caged the cat was within her rights in eating the birds. The law seems a bit involved in this decision, but the gist of it seems to be that a cat may eat a canary if she catches it out of its cage. The courts have not been called on yet to decide what would happen to a cat which burglariously broke open a case and ate the occupants.

OTTAWA NEWS.

Lumsden Charges.

When members of the opposition undertook to extend moral support to Mr. Lumsden with regard to his charges against engineers of the National Transcontinental Railway company they reckoned without their host. It quickly appeared that whatever the motive was which actuated Mr. Lumsden, it had nothing to do with any wrongdoing on the part of the engineers.

Tories' First Rebuff.

Mr. Lumsden has already exonerated the engineering staff and the National Transcontinental commission. The Tory members on the committee sought an avenue of escape and ultimately found it.

However, being on the committee they had to do something, and they adopted a most unusual course. Mr. Lumsden said he did not desire any counsel, although the government was willing to bear the expense of same. The opposition members on the committee tried in vain to influence him and compel him to have counsel against his will.

Tories' Second Rebuff.

Then they wanted a counsel to act on behalf of the people, a counsel to be appointed, not by the Liberals, not by the committee, but by the opposition members of the committee.

In support of this Mr. Crothers laid down the strange ethics that it was well known that counsel suppressed any information damaging to a client, and accentuated other evidence which might be in his favor.

This might be the practice among country lawyers of small experience, but is not the case with eminent members of the bar who have a reputation to preserve.

The committee declined to allow such unheard of procedure. They would not listen to a request that the minority should appoint a partisan lawyer, but contended that any appointment should be made by the committee as a whole. This was their second rebuff.

conception of the principal involved. Others, obscure men, with little learning, less intelligence, and limited experience place an interpretation upon words of the prime minister which they could not bear, even as they distort them. They fail to comprehend the plainest form of English grammar in which the prime minister conveys his meaning.

Quotation Read Ad Nauseum.

One quotation alone has been read fifteen times by members of the Opposition, and each man reads it as if he has made a great discovery. Debate is carried to the point of absurdity, when men whose names are unknown beyond their own home town, accuse a man of the eminence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, of disloyalty. When His Majesty the King sends a personal telegram to Sir Wilfrid Laurier bearing testimony to his loyalty to the Crown and empire, it is farcical to hear men of mediocre attainments, whose names have only recently been added to the directory, flippantly allude to one, "the lachet of whose shoes" they are not worthy to unlaces.

Member Called Down.

The Conservative member for Frontenac, who stated that the French Canadians were disloyal was first rebuked by a member on his own side of the house, and since that time he has received a rebuke from almost every Liberal member, until he found refuge in an appeal to the chair, and a general denial.

Borden's Dilemma.

Mr. Borden finds himself in a dilemma because of his opposition to the building of dry docks and shipbuilding yards in Halifax, all of which would come with the establishment of a Canadian navy. His constituents in Halifax will repudiate these views when given an opportunity.

Fights Shy of Issue.

Every Conservative who has yet spoken fights shy of the main features of the argument. Their amendment is based upon there being an emergency. They have not attempted to demonstrate by any authority that there is an emergency. On the other hand all authority goes to prove that there is no emergency.

Things Tories Don't Explain.

They don't explain how often the contribution of $25,000,000 a year will have to be made to Great Britain.

They say nothing about their loyalty should there be another demand next year, and the following year, but they say, pay this money now, and be done with the matter.

In other words Conservative loyalty may be estimated at $25,000,000 each this year, and no loyalty afterwards, even if there be an emergency by and by.

They don't care where the money goes; they give it to Great Britain to do with as she thinks fit, therefore it may be spent in coal stations anywhere within the British empire, or for any other purpose.

They give no reasons why $25,000,000 is the exact figure to meet an emergency, and restore security to the Empire.

They don't say what the emergency is, because they don't know.

They give no reasons why there should not be a Canadian navy.

Things They Cannot Explain.

They cannot explain why Canadian money should not be expended in Canada for the benefit of Canada and the Empire.

They fail to appreciate the patriotic idea of the establishment of great Canadian industries.

They cannot understand the value to Canadian commerce of a fleet of swift cruisers to protect our interests in time of war, and thus save England

MEN WHO USE ZAM-BUK.

HOW IT SAVES THEM MONEY.

Look at the financial side of Zam-Buk's use. A cut sustained in the workshop, a sore which is unattended, results say in festering or blood-poisoning. You have to lay off for a day or two. What does that mean when pay day comes round? Zam-Buk insures you against that loss! A little Zam-Buk applied to such an injury at the time, or as soon afterwards as possible, prevents all danger of blood-poisoning, takes out the smarting and starts up healing.

Heads of families know how costly doctoring is. Be wise and act on the preventive line. A box of Zam-Buk in the home is all-round useful. The baby's rashes, the older children's cuts and bruises, the inevitable burn, cut, or scald—for all these, as well as for more serious ailments, such as piles, ulcers, eczema, ringworm, etc., Zam-Buk is without a rival.

Dangers of shaving—You get a cut at the barber's shop. A little Zam-Buk smeared on the wound prevents all danger. If any ailment has been contracted, Zam-Buk cures. Mr. Geo. Hobdon, 108 Manitoba Street, St. Thomas, Ontario, says: "I contracted barber's rash, and the whole of my left cheek broke out in one mass of red, watery pimples and sores. These spread to the other parts of my face, until face and neck were covered with running sores. How far this disease would have spread had it not been for berg of the bar who have a reputation to preserve.

The committee declined to allow such unheard of procedure. They would not listen to a request that the minority should appoint a partisan lawyer, but contended that any appointment should be made by the committee as a whole.

This was their second rebuff.

Tories' Third Rebuff.

It was then arranged that two members of the committee, Messrs. MacDonald and Barker, should submit a name to the committee. This was done, and the name of Wallace Nesbit, K. C., ex-judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, and a Conservative was submitted, but the Conservatives refused to accept him: They still contended for the right to appoint a counsel of their own selection. The committee firmly refused to agree to this.

This was their third rebuff.

Tories' Fourth Rebuff.

Realizing that they could not run the committee to suit their own political ends, the Conservative members resigned in a body. Whereupon the committee appointed Mr. Chrysler, K. C. of Ottawa to represent the people, and announced that the investigation would proceed as if nothing had happened.

This was their fourth rebuke.

Would Not Face Music.

The Conservatives thought that if they resigned the committee would disband and there would be no investigation, which would have suited their views; but the committee thought differently, and intend to proceed and find out from Mr. Lumsden just why he resigned and the names of the engineers, if any, who had forfeited his confidence.

All Parties Represented.

As affairs stand now all parties are represented by counsel and Mr. Lumsden will consult with Mr. Chrysler, and the investigation will proceed just the same as if the Conservatives had remained on the committee.

The Conservatives were not anxious to have this matter probed, for the investigation was proposed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. They have followed the lead of Mr. Lumsden, who resigned because, he said, he had lost confidence in his staff. The Conservatives resigned from the committee because they had lost confidence in themselves. Both would have received a larger measure of public respect had they stuck to their guns.

Naval Debate.

The debate on the navy bill is drawing to a close. The Borden amendment was defeated by 55 votes. The past week has seen the same wearisome repetitions of previous speakers.

Nothing Said About Bill.

Members of the Opposition say little or nothing about the bill, it is a question whether many of them have read it, it is a fact that they don't talk about it. Reference is made to early history, long extracts, are read from newspapers, pamphlets and moribund political speeches, but nothing about the bill before the House.

money should not be expended in Canada for the benefit of Canada and the Empire.

They fail to appreciate the patriotic idea of the establishment of great Canadian industries.

They cannot understand the value to Canadian commerce of a fleet of swift cruisers to protect our interests in time of war, and thus save England the expense of sending to this country precisely the same character of vessels in case of hostilities.

They will not admit the palpable truth that Canada is doing the very thing suggested by the British Admiralty as being the best under the circumstances.

They insist upon mixing up preliminary suggestions made before a conference met, with the considered decision of the conference after full discussion.

Simply Obstruction.

They are more intent upon opposing the suggestion of the political party to which they owe no allegiance, than they are actuated by any desire to serve either their country or the Empire.

They are more inclined to treat the whole navy scheme as one submitted by their opponents, which must therefore be opposed, rather than regard the question as one upon which they should show their loyalty to the Empire by supporting.

Change of Front Unexplained.

Leaders of the Conservative party have not explained to the country why they announced a certain policy and expressed certain opinions last March, with regard to the navy, and why they now ask the country to accept another policy, and other opinions diametrically opposed to the first ones.

Not Edifying Spectacle.

It is not an edifying spectacle in public life to find leaders of a great party inviting the people to support them in a certain line of policy, and then within a few months denouncing the same policy and expecting the people to support them in their inconsistency. Yet this is the spectacle presented by the Conservative party today that is, of the few members of the party who find their way into the House of Commons.

In March last Mr. Borden was in favor of a Canadian navy and so were the rank and file of the party. Now Sir Wilfrid Laurier has introduced a bill founded on the resolution unanimously passed by the House last March, and Mr. Borden heads his followers in rebellion against it.

No Public Interest Served.

It does not appear that any public interest is being served by opposing the government in this matter, because the Government are responsible to the people and the opposition are not responsible in the same sense. If the Government fail to pass the bill by reason of opposition, the people hold the Government responsible, not the Opposition, who in this regard are not directly responsible to the people.

Always "Agin" the Government.

The present Opposition in Parliament are unique in one respect. They unite to oppose any Government measure. They give no adequate reasons, do not explain why they follow such a course, offer no alternative policy, but simply go against the Government without explanation or reason.

Why Sessions Are Long.

It is this unreasonable obstruction to everything proposed by the Government which makes the sessions so long and costly. If the Conservatives offered any useful suggestions or amendments, their presence in the House might be regarded as useful to the people at large, but they have not this reason to offer.

An Absurd Contention.

One of the most absurd objections urged by the Conservatives against the Navy bill is that it tends to separation. Another objection is, that the Navy is so small that it might be described as a "stay at home navy". These two objections cannot be reconciled.

Food For Thought.

Had the Government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier laid plans for a navy consisting of several Dreadnoughts and auxiliaries, an immense fighting machine that might compete with other nations single handed then the charge that separation was intended might be argued with some degree of reason. On the other how a country can sue-

BETTER THAN SPANKING.

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box 851 her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her cessfully attempt separation by inaugurating what has been described as a "tin pot" navy, passes ordinary comprehension.

Tory Manner of Reasoning.

According to the Conservatives Canada establishes a small navy, sufficient for purposes of coast defence and the defence of trade routes and this means separation from the Empire. But according to the same authority, if Canada should commence now and lay down navy that would be a formidable instrument of war, it does not mean separation from the Empire.

In other words, if Canada does something for naval defence which will not help the Empire then it will help Canada to stand without the assistance of Great Britain.

But should Canada embark on a great naval building policy, this will bind her more strongly to the empire.

Logical Deduction.

The logical deduction being that the less able Canada is to stand alone, the more she desires separation, and the better able she is to fight her own bat-breach and offering the price of two Dreadnoughts, which could not be built in several years, to prevent Germany from blockading the port of London this summer!

Think of the effect on the British mind of Canada preserving the British Empire in face of an emergency which has never been seriously considered in England!

Think of the gratitude which Canada would provoke in England by a request for a loan of $25,000,000 to satisfy the English mind that Canadians are loyal to the Empire!

Imagine the comment of a paelegma-tic, practical Britisher when he hears that Canada's idea of assisting the empire is to borrow money from England and then present it as a free gift and decline to construct a navy for home defence!

The True, Practical Idea.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has the true and practical idea. He intends to construct a navy in Canada with Canadian money, by Canadian working men.

He intends to construct dry docks and shipbuilding yards where vessels of war can be constructed and repaired.

He intends to found a naval college where young men may prepare themselves for a naval career.

He intends to do this so that in time of war Great Britain will be relieved of the task of sending a fleet to Canada to protect our coast and commerce.
Sir Wilfrid has the true Canadian idea.

A LITTLE PLEASANTRY.

He Tried It on the Duchess According to the Rules.

"If seated next to a lady at dinner and if at a loss for a topic, touch lightly on the weather. Then turn to dress. If that fails, try a little pleas-antry."

With these words from "Etiquette
For the Populace" stamped upon his memory, Mr. Quickrich, who had made a million out of candles and thus gained a sudden entry into society, escorted the Duchess of Dash into the dining room. The multiplicity of forks and knives and spoons staggered him.
The soup nearly made him faint. But he took his courage and an olive in both hands and launched forth pluckily.

"Bloomin' dull day, duch, ain't it?"
he began, recalling topic No. 1.

"Ahem!" he coughed as he remembered the next topic, dress. "Er—do you wear flannel next the skin?"

A marble shoulder nearly knocked him in the eye—a very cold and frigid shoulder.

"Hum!" muttered Quickrich. "Rather 'ard to get along with. Let's see.
I'll try Pleasantry."

The Duchess of Dash's back was turned to him. He protruded a forefinger and jabbed her in the ribs.

"Click!" he cried playfully.

And that absolutely did it, and himself with it.—London Answers.

coast of Alaska has a relation to the present methods of personal decoration now used by the natives of Alaska, the most significant feature of which is the wearing of lip buttons, or labrets, by the men.

The present custom is that when a boy is fourteen or sixteen years of age holes are pierced in his lower lip, one below each corner of the mouth. A small wooden plug is at first inserted to keep the hole from growing together, and month by month a bigger

Drink and Diplomacy.

Prince Bismarck once boasted that in his youth he drank a bottle of champagne at one draft from a "puzzle goblet so constructed that one could not bring it close to one's lips, yet one was not allowed to spill a drop. Not a single drop fell on my waistcoat.
Every one was immensely surprised, but I said, 'Give me another.' Such tricks were formerly an indispensable part of the diplomats' trade. They drank the weaker vessels under the table, wormed all they wanted to know out of them and made them agree to things contrary to their instructions.
When they got sober they could not imagine why they had acted so."

What They Were Hawking.

At an exhibition of paintings in London in one of the galleries hung the notable picture "Hawking In the Olden Times." An elderly farmer and his wife paused before this picture, viewing it with evident satisfaction.

"John," said the old lady, "what's that?"

John then turned over the leaves of the catalogue he carried.

"They call it 'Hawking I th' Owden Time,'" said he.

"Hawking! Why, what are they hawking?" she inquired.

"I dunno," he replied, "but I spect they're trying to sell them birds."

great building. But should Canada embark on a great naval building policy, this will bind her more strongly to the empire.

Logical Deduction.

The logical deduction being that the less able Canada is to stand alone, the more she desires separation, and the better able she is to fight her own battles, the more she requires the help of the mother country.

Any man with a logical mind would see in the establishment of a great Canadian navy the expression of a desire at some time in the future to be independent of outside help; and this is not inconsistent with loyalty to the empire, but no man with reasoning powers would regard the navy as contemplated in the bill before the House, which provides for the nucleus of a navy, as a movement having for its object separation from the British Crown.

Undigested Views.

Yet these are the undigested views brought before the House by men whose very habits of life are contrary to careful thought upon a problem of this character. One of the strongest features of the debate which stands out prominently is, that men of little experience and no personal knowledge of the subject have given pronounced views on a situation they don't understand.

Reductio Ad Absurdum.

In England, the opinions and fears expressed by Conservative members from rural constituencies, men who never saw a battleship, and to whom the smallest cruiser contemplated in the Government programme would be a revelation of might and strength, must cause greatest amusement.

Think of Canada saving the empire by borrowing $25,000,000 from England and then handing over the money to avert a crisis which doesn't exist! Think of Canada jumping into the labrets, by the men.

The present custom is that when a boy is fourteen or sixteen years of age holes are pierced in his lower lip, one below each corner of the mouth. A small wooden plug is at first inserted to keep the hole from growing together, and month by month a bigger and bigger plug is used, till finally the openings are half an inch in diameter.

At this point the young man begins to wear stone or ivory plugs. These ornaments are put in from the inside ordinarily as one might insert a button into a shirt front. Usually the two buttons worn are each of a different sort, while sometimes only one of the holes is filled, and in summer men are occasionally met with who wear no buttons at all.

When a visitor is seen approaching, however, the ornaments are always inserted, for one does not feel dressed without them. In preparing for sleep they are usually removed.—V. Stefans son in Harper's Magazine.

After All His Trouble.

Two men were hurrying along Park row when the wind seemed to be blowing from all directions to the peril of umbrellas and anything not firmly anchored. One of them noticed the handle of a wrecked umbrella which had been thrown into the street along with many others and, stopping to pick it up, remarked to his companion that it was too good to pass. As he stooped a gust of wind captured his hat, and it went spinning along toward St. Paul's chapel, he after it. He ran into a man, slipped, fell in the mud and arose in time to see his hat run over by a truck. At a nearby restaurant, where he was drying his clothes, he said: "I lost a five dollar hat and spoiled a suit of clothes for the handle of a thirty cent umbrella. That would not be so bad, but I see the handle is broken."—New York Tribune.

Make Each Animal Worth 25% Over Its Cost On 2/3 of a Cent a Day

Nobody ever heard of "stock food" curing the hots or colic, making hens lay in winter, increasing the yield of milk five pounds per cow a day, or restoring run-down animals to plumpness and vigor.

When you feed "stock food" to your cow, horse, swine or poultry, you are merely feeding them what you are growing on your own farm.

Your animals do need not more feed, but something to help their bodies get all the good out of the feed you give them so they can get fat and stay fat all year round; also to prevent disease, cure disease and keep them up to the best possible condition. No "stock food" can do all these things. ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC can and does. It is

Not a "Stock Food" But a "Conditioner"

ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC contains no grain, nor farm products. It increases yield of milk from three to five pounds per cow per day before the Specific has been used two weeks. It makes the milk richer and adds flesh faster than any other preparation known. Young calves fed with ROYAL PURPLE are as large at six weeks old as they would be when fed with ordinary materials at ten weeks.

ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC builds up run-down animals and restores them to plumpness almost magically. Cures hots, colic, worms, skin diseases and debility permanently.

Dan McEwan, the horseman, says: "I have used ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC persistently in the feeding of 'The Eel,' 2024, largest winner of an pacer on Grand Circuit in 1908, and Henry Winters, 2094, brother of 'Allen Winters,' winner of $30,000 trotting stakes Specific almost a year ago, and I will always have it in my stables."

STOCK AND POULTRY SPECIFICS

One 50c. package of ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC will last one animal seventy days, which is a little over two-thirds of a cent a day. Most stock foods in fifty-cent packages last but fifty days and are given three times a day. ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC is given but once a day, and lasts half again as long. A $1.50 package containing four times the amount of the fifty-cent package will last 280 days. ROYAL PURPLE will increase the value of your stock 25%. It is an astonishingly quick fattener, stimulating the appetite and the relish for food, assisting nature to digest and turn feed into flesh. As a hog fattenor it is a leader.

It will save many times its cost in veterinary bills. ROYAL PURPLE POULTRY SPECIFIC is our other Specific for poultry, not for stock. One 50-cent package will last twenty-five hens 20 days, or a pair costing $1.50 will last twenty-five hens 280 days, which is four times more summer and winter, prevents fowls losing flesh at moulting time, and cures poultry diseases. Every package of ROYAL PURPLE STOCK SPECIFIC or POULTRY SPECIFIC is guaranteed.

Just use ROYAL PURPLE on one of your animals and any other preparation on another animal in the same condition; after comparing results you will say ROYAL PURPLE has them all beat to death, or else back comes your money. FREE—Ask your merchant or write us for our valuable 32-page booklet on cattle and poultry diseases, containing also cooking recipes and full particulars about ROYAL PURPLE STOCK AND POULTRY SPECIFICS.

ANOTHER MIRACLE IN NOVA SCOTIA

Thought the Disease was Cancer of the Stomach

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Cured Him

SYDNEY MINES, N. S., JANUARY 25TH 1910

"For many years I suffered torture from Indigestion and Dyspepsia. Two years ago, I was so bad that I vomited my food constantly. The agony I endured all these years, I cannot describe and I lost over 25 pounds in weight. I also suffered with Constipation which made the stomach trouble worse. I consulted physicians, as I was afraid the disease was cancer but medicine gave only temporary relief and then the disease was as bad as ever.

I read in the "Maritime Baptist" about "Fruit-a-tives" and the cures this medicine was making and I decided to try it. After taking three boxes, I found a great change for the better and now I can say "Fruit-a-tives" has entirely cured me when every other treatment failed, and I reverently say "Thank God for Fruit-a-tives"!!"

EDWIN ORAM, SR.

"Fruit-a-tives" sweetens the stomach, increases the flow of gastric juice, strengthens the stomach muscles, and insures sound digestion. The wonderful powers of this famous fruit medicine are never more clearly shown than in curing the apparently hopeless cases of Dyspepsia and Constipation. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. ## UNDER AN UMBRELLA.

An Expensive Adventure of a Famous Parisian Wit.

Romieu, the famous Parisian wit, was one day caught in a shower and forced to seek refuge in a doorway of the opera house. It was 6 o'clock already, and he had an engagement in the Cafe de Paris for that very hour. The rain fell in torrents. There was no carriage to be had. He had no umbrella. What was to be done? While he was lamenting his bad luck a gentleman with a large umbrella passed by. Romieu was seized with a sudden inspiration. He rushed out and grasped the stranger by the arm and gratefully installed himself under the protecting umbrella.

"I am overjoyed to see you," he immediately began. "I have been looking for you for two weeks. I wanted to tell you about Clementine."

Without giving the stranger time to express his surprise Romieu rattled away with gossip and anecdote until he had led the unknown companion to the door of the Cafe de Paris. Then he glanced at him with a face of well feigned astonishment.

"Pardon, monsieur!" he cried. "It of them said:

"Your cravat is rumpled."

Romieu put his hand to his neck and turned pale. His pin, a valuable sapphire, was gone. On further examination his purse and watch were found to be gone. The man with the umbrella was a pickpocket.—London Tit-Bits.

His Good Work.

The director of a prison received an order after many years' service. He had all the prisoners called together and made the following speech to them:

"As you see, I have been decorated, by royal grace, with an order. But I willingly acknowledge that this has been attained not alone by my own merits, but by the co-operation of all of us. I can also declare, with pleasure, that since I have occupied this office the number of prisoners has increased from 100 to 700—a fact of which both you and I may be justly proud."—London Tit-Bits.

HIS WIFE'S TRIUMPH.

A Memento That Was Inspiring to John Richard Green.

It has been the fate of many men of letters to have ill health bearing them down as they struggle on toward literary achievements. Thus beset in recent times were Stevenson, Richard Jeffries and J. R. Green. Each of these, it happened, had a high hearted wife to keep him up, even to help him with the actual labor of writing. "The Life and Letters of J. R. Green" show forth a great and sweet man. They show, too, a wife whose sympathy and fortitude helped to make his accomplishment possible.

In copying the vast amount of manuscript of her husband's books Mrs. Green contracted writer's cramp and was forced to stop using her right hand. This looked like a final obstacle in the way of the invalid, who did much of his thinking in bed and could not write himself. But Mrs. Green set to work at once learning to write with her left hand.

One of her first practice pages, which she was about to destroy with the rest, her husband took quietly and put in his pocket. Years afterward when ill health seemed unbearable and in discouragement he felt that he could not work he used to take out that piece of paper, a living record of his wife's triumph over difficulty. When he saw the painful, patient strokes by which Mrs. Green had learned to write with her left hand he could work on with something near to inspiration.

PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—bowels, kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up, the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For some time I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all druggists.

Poison of the Centiped.

The centipede is popularly supposed to carry a sting on each foot, but I have several times handled one after its head was removed without the claws producing any result. It is the first pair of claws only that are venomous, being hollow and provided with poison bags like a snake's fang. The largest I ever saw was eleven inches in length, a gruesome creature. A bite from one of this size would most likely have been fatal to a man in weak health. The tarantula, though his powers of offense are nothing like those of the scorpion or centipede, is, however, a more unpopular character than either. The horror of these large spiders entertained by many people is curious and unaccountable. I have seen Australian bushmen, who in everyday life scarcely seemed to understand danger, turn white as a sheet at the sight of a small "triantelope," as they called it.—Chambers' Journal.

 "Good gracious!" added Romieu. "Be discreet. Don't repeat what I have told you."
 "I promise you."
 "A thousand pardons!"
 Romieu hastened within the cafe and amid great laughter told the adventure to his friends. Suddenly one in some parts of England one of the best cures for a swollen neck is to draw a snake nine times across the throat of the suffering one, after which the snake is killed and its skin sewed in a silk bag and tightly sewed around the neck. Another way almost as good, is to put the live snake in a bottle, which is tightly corked and buried near the roots of a rose bush, and as the helpless snake decays the swelling in the neck of the patient will disappear.

The Greatness of The Anglo Saxon Race.

Composition by W. P. VanLuven, a student at the Nananee Collegiate Institute.

This subject gives an enormous scope for consideration, in fact, so large that it would be impossible for anyone to give it any sense of justice in so brief a space as I have allotted to me to-day. Before proceeding, it would be well for us to decide from what standpoint we shall consider our subject. I think the following views would be not only proper, but fitting to the Anglo-Saxon race. We may take military, a manufacturing, a discovering, a commercial, a literary and a civilizing standpoint.

First we shall deal with the race from a military standpoint. We shall not review the history of England from the time of the invasion of the Angles and Saxons up to the present day when the world is expecting the Germans to cross the same sea, to land at the same island and to conquer the same country. The names of Nelson, Wellington, Wolfe and many other brave men need no introduction to any British subject to-day. The Union Jack has flown triumphant ever since the dreaded Armada was sent home disgraced. Both on land and on sea the British warrior has been undaunted and unbeaten. Along with this we may consider the national importance of our race. The colonies of the British Empire are not bound down and oppressed as were those of other great nations before her and her laws are universally acknowledged as the standard for justice and humanity. We may also remember the brave and well-trained Canadian contingents who fought in the Boer War.

Thus we see that the bravery of our Anglo-Saxon forefathers has been handed down from generation to generation, from century to century, and to-day our army and navy can go forth and battle as successfully as ever in spite of the election scare which foretold of a German invasion.

Secondly let us look at England's manufactures. Her iron and coal mines lying side by side are most advantageous to the great iron and steel industries. There is no firmer guarantee to-day than the universally desired, "Made in England." Turning to Canada we find many industries beginning to spring up. Her natural resources are being put to more use each year and Canada certainly has an enviable future before us.

THE BEST REMEDY

For Women—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Belleville, Ont.—"I was so weak and worn out from a female weakness that I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took several bottles of it, and I gained strength so rapidly that it seemed to make a new woman of me. I can do as good a day's work as I ever did. I sincerely bless the day that I made up my mind to take your medicine for female weakness, and I am exceedingly grateful to you for your kind letters, as I certainly profited by them. I give you permission to publish this any time you wish."—Mrs. ALBERT WICKETT, Belleville, Ontario, Canada.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will cure female weakness and so successfully carry women through the Change of Life as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs.

For 30 years it has been curing women from the worst forms of female ills—inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and nervous prostration.

If you want special advice write for it to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

Thirdly let us look at Anglo-Saxon discoveries. The well-known names of Drake, Froisher, Hawkins, Gladstone, Cabot and an extensive list of others, only awaken in us a slight idea of what this race has accomplished in this line. You may say that this old spirit of discovery has waned considerably, because we have no discoverers now. If it had not been for the sturdy old Anglo-Saxons of Newfoundland, Cook and Peary would have done well to start for the Pole, let alone discover or come near discovering it as the case may be. The back-bone of all the North Pole searching parties has been the Newfoundland fishermen, who are truly and undoubtedly good old Anglo-Saxon settlers. We have also a worthy explorer in the personage of Captain Scott, whose trips in search of the South Pole have been both hazardous and successful.

We will now pass to the standpoint of civilization. Not long ago, in relation to all past time, the land from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Hudson Bay to the Antarctic regions, was but the wild and unexplored battle-ground and hunting region of the cruel and uncivilized red-skin. Now this land is fast becoming the leading territory of the world. Ever since the little band of Pilgrim worshippers stepped from the "Mayflower" on Plymouth Rock, this gradual change has been taking place.

Africa was once a feverish, swampy forest, teeming with unhappy negroes who were hunted down and exported as slaves but now, due to the interference of British colonization and civilization, it is quickly changing into a fertile, well-governed continent. Australia was once the home of a few banished criminals who were thought to be unfit for human society. Now it is a flourishing British Colony awakening to the fact that it is bound to make a mark in the world's history.

Let us now turn to literature and art. The English language was once spoken by the people who inhabited the British Isles. Now it has extended over nearly all the civilized world. America, India, Africa, Australia and many smaller colonies and islands have adopted this language. We have the names of Shakespeare, Tennyson, Longfellow, Milton, Bunyan, Ruskin and countless others, which stand out as masters in literature. As for art we need only to visit the British Royal Art Gallery and we will believe that Anglo Saxon art is certainly magnificent.

As for commerce England leads the world. Her ships sail every ocean and touch at every port on the globe. Her colonies produce nearly every known article of commerce and therefore the British Empire has the facilities of trade in its grasp. Year by year each of the colonies is advancing in commerce and surely Anglo-Saxon commerce is destined to become far greater than it is at present.

I have not attempted to give a definite or full account of the greatness of the Anglo-Saxon race, but have just dealt briefly with a few of the main points. To deal with such topics as invention, religion and so forth would mean a task which would require days to complete.

SUFFERED FOR YEARS

Says Peruna Completely Restored Health.

MRS. CHAS. GROS LOUIS.

MRS. CHAS. GROS LOUIS, Indian Lorette, Quebec, Can., writes:

"For years I suffered from a disease that the doctors did not understand.

"One day I read in the paper about your excellent remedy, Peruna. I procured a bottle of it and took it according to directions. It was not long until I observed a change for the better.

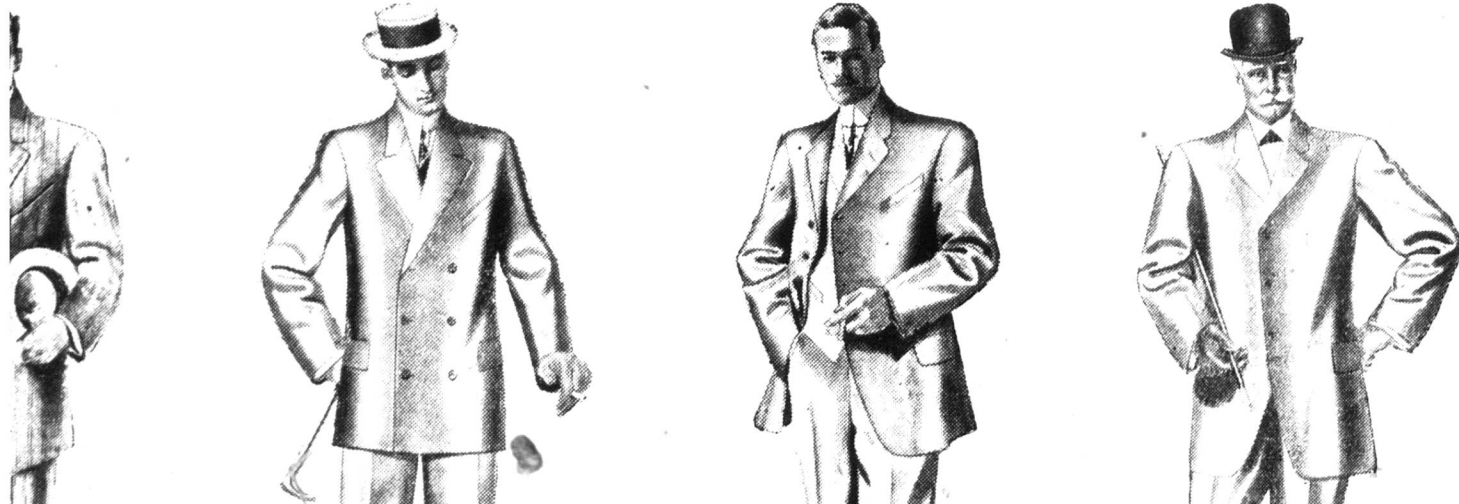

"I can say that Peruna has cured me. I could not take any nourishment except milk.

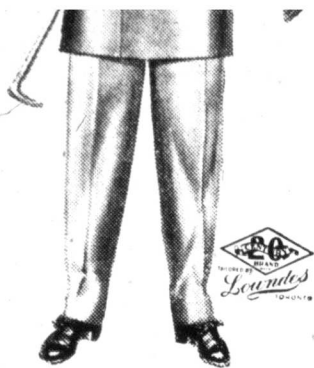

"I will at all times say a good word for Peruna. I hold it in the highest esteem."

Not only women of rank and leisure praise Peruna, but the industrious, useful women engaged in manual toil would not be without Dr. Hartman's world-renowned remedy.

The doctor has prescribed it for many thousand women every year and he never fails to receive a multitude of letters like the above, thanking him for his advice, and especially for the wonderful benefits received from Peruna.

New Health and Strength for Weak and Ailing Girls

Can Be Had Through the Rich, Red Blood Made by Dr.
Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

There comes a time in the life of almost every girl when sickness attacks her. The strain upon her blood supply is too great, and there comes headaches and backaches, loss of appetite, attacks of dizziness and heart palpitation, and a general tendency to a decline. The only thing that can promptly and speedily cure these troubles is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This is the only medicine that actually makes new, rich, red blood, and a plentiful supply of rich blood is the one thing needed to maintain the health of growing girls and women of mature years. The truth of this statement is proved in the case of Miss Esther E. Sproule, Truemanville, N. S., who says: "At the age of sixteen years I left my country home to attend high school. The close confinement and long hours of study nearly broke me down. My blood supply seemed to be deficient, and I grew pale and depressed. I was dizzy nearly all the time, and pimples broke out on my face. I was altogether in a miserable condition and it seemed impossible for me to continue my studies unless I found a speedy cure. I tried several tonics prescribed by the doctor, but they proved useless. My mother urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I finally consented to do so. I had hardly finished the second box before a change for the better took place, and the use of a few boxes more fully restored my health, and I have since been well and strong. I feel that I cannot say too much in favor of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I strongly recommend them to other ailing girls."

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE MYSTERY CLEARED UP;

OR, THE HERITAGE OF MADAME YALTA.

"A name which will tell you nothing. It was Ladislav. But I know the man."

"Ah," said the countess, tranquilly. "Who is he?"

"He is a foreigner, a Slav who led a mysterious life here, and suddenly disappeared. He lived in Rue Joffroy, and had for companion a marvellously beautiful creature who vanished with himself. Dr. Villagos pointed her out to me at the Rink."

"And no doubt you made love to her," said Madame Yalta, smiling.

"No. I accompanied her to her door, where I narrowly escaped being murdered. It was Georget who saved me from them. Being their accomplice he was aware of their plans, and manoeuvred so as to deliver me from them without denouncing them."

"We see now that Georget knows better than any one what has transpired, since he knows the thief. Let us return, then, I beg, to M. de Carnoel. It is he alone who interests me, and whom I wish to find."

"I think I have discovered him."

"You have seen him?"

"No, but I know where he is. It chanced that, on returning with Georget to his grandmother, he recognized a certain wall from the foot of which he had fallen and re-perplexed. These Russians have a marvellous sang froid."

"What was his reply?"

"He began by asking why I applied to him for news of the young man, and feigned ignorance. Then I told him plainly that M. de Carnoel had been seen to enter his house, that he had not been seen to come out, and that he must be still there."

"And in proceeding thus you hoped M. Borisoff would confess what he had done and yield up his prisoner to you?"

"I confess I had not reflected much—I followed the first impulse—which I regret, since you disapprove of it," added Maxime, sadly, feeling conscious that his conduct appeared absurd in Madame Yalta's eyes.

"Oh, I do not reproach you; you acted for the best! Tell me now the interview terminated."

"The Russian denied the charge with disdain. I threatened him with recourse to the commissary of police."

"Nothing more was wanting—"

"I was irritated, else I should not have gone so far, especially as I have no idea of mixing the police up with this affair. And the colonel did not seem to attach any importance to this menace, for he assumed a haughty and contemptuous tone, which exasperated me. I redoubled my urgency, he requested me to leave, and I went out an-disposal, let me enlighten you further as to the history of the theft. It is well you should know all. One Wednesday evening, Vignory and I, who were going to pass the evening at my uncle's, observed a light in the office, and on going in made a frightful discovery. The safe is defended by an apparatus so constructed as to seize by the arm any one who shall attempt to open it without taking certain precautions. Well, a woman's hand was found remaining in the vice. To avoid being arrested, she had caused her hand to be amputated."

"Do you believe an ordinary thief would have done that?" asked the countess, in a quivering voice.

"Assuredly not. I thought from the first this attempt at theft had a special motive. Afterward, when I learned the disappearance of the Russian's casket, I was convinced of it. We conceived—Vignory and I—the unfortunate idea of keeping what we had learned, secret. The attempt was not repeated by the woman, who must have been suffering the consequences of the amputation."

"If she did not die of it," murmured the countess.

"It is certain that she had an accomplice—this Ladislav mentioned by Georget—and the next day this accomplice succeeded without accident."

"You say that there were two attempts at theft, and that the first took place during a soiree at M. Dorgeres'. M. de Carnoel was doubtless in your uncle's salon at that time?"

"Yes, certainly; he never missed the Wednesday reception."

"He was not, therefore, with the thieves. It might be said he had given them instructions. It is inadmissible. Information, furnished by the secretary of M. Dorgeres', the intimate friend of the cashier, would have been more complete. The unfortunate woman, who was mutilated, would not have lost her hand. He who took the casket the next evening understood how to avoid its terrible embrace. Do you still maintain that in this interval M. de Carnoel might have warned them? It would be an absurd supposition. The secretary, initiated into all his master's secrets, must have long known the existence of the trap, and had he been in league with the thieves, would not have waited for a grave accident before pointing out the means to avoid it."

"All that is very just," murmured Maxime.

"So just," resumed the countess with energy, "that I am lost in amazement at the blindness which struck you all at the moment the theft was discovered. To accuse a man for the simple reason that he is absent is something unheard-of."

"It was not I,—I did not accuse him,—I was not present."

"No; Georget told me there were only this Russian and the cashier. The Russian was in the waiting-room. The cashier was alone when he discovered the theft."

"True; but he called Col. Borisoff, and sent immediately for my uncle. Vignory verified the contents in his presence."

"And they recognized the disappearance of the casket. The cashier also made known that a sum of money was taken—I don't know what, something comparatively insignificant,—and it was believed on his affirmation."

"But—unless it could be suppos-

GAVE HIS WEIGHT IN GOLD.

Indian Maharajah Helps Poor According to Oriental Custom.

The Maharajah of Nepal, one of the great Indian semi-dependent princes, who is an honorary Major-General in the British army and a D. C. L. of Oxford, and has translated several English military works into his own language, is still Oriental enough to have conformed to an ancient Indian custom, that of giving away his own weight in metal for distribution among the poor.

The Maharajah is enormously rich, and it was his weight in gold that went to enrich an enormous crowd of beggars and pilgrims at a holy place named Patshupatmath a few weeks ago. When Indian princes make a vow, for example on the recovery from some great illness, they liberate themselves from it by a ceremony which is called Tula. The person weighs himself in gold, or if not very rich in baser metal or even grain, and the amount is given to the poor.

The gold in this case was instantly bought up by jewellers, and the silver coin paid for it was distributed among the populace, who were also fed and clothed by the Maharajah.

STONEWALL'S BRIDGE-BUILDER.

"Stonewall Jackson," said an old Army veteran, "used to tell a story about a bridge-builder."

"This bridge-builder was called old Miles. He was very necessary to Jackson because the flimsy bridges on the line of march were continually being swept away by the floods or destroyed by the enemy; and in these contingencies Miles was a regular jewel. He could run up a bridge in the time it would take another man to make the measurements."

"One day the Union troops burned a bridge across the Shenandoah. Stonewall Jackson called old Miles to him and said:

"You must put all your men to work, Miles, and you must keep them at it all night, for I've got to have a bridge across this stream by morning. My engineer will draw up the plans for you."

"Well, early next morning Jackson, very much worried, met old Miles."

"See here," he said, dubiously: "how about that bridge? Did the engineer give you the plan?"

"Old Miles took the cigar from

A SENSIBLE MAN.

"I suppose," said the poor but otherwise truthful young man, cautiously feeling his way, "that you wouldn't be satisfied with love in a cottage?"

"Why not?" queried the fair maid. "I'm sure I'd rather marry the right man with an income of only $5,000 a year than a million-aire I didn't love."

And, having sense enough to see there was nothing doing in his line, the young man quickly faded away.

CAUSE OF ECZEMA EXPLAINED

Germes Fester in the Skin and Blood
Cures are Impossible.

After years of debate medical authorities are now agreed that Eczema and other skin diseases are not seated in the blood, but are caused by germes in the skin. Myriads of microscopic animals gnaw the flesh just below the epidermis. The patient is perfectly healthy, it is only the skin that is diseased. Hence, scientists are now agreed that you must cure the skin through the skin.

The medicine must be in liquid form in order to penetrate properly, as salves and ointments clog the pores without reaching the inner skin.

The remedy that will search out and destroy the disease germes, stop the itch and soothe the healthy tissue is that mild, clean compound of oil of wintergreen, thymol, glycerine, etc., known as D. D. D. Prescription.

The instant you wash with this soothing liquid you will find the itch relieved. We positively assure you of this.

SMART DIPLOMACY.

Prince Jaisingrao, the son of the Gaekwar of Baroda, denied in New York recently that his father had said he found American women ugly.

"My father," said the young man, "is too adroit to make such a remark as that. Even if he thought it—and he doesn't—he wouldn't dream of saying it. He is too adroit. Listen."

"Once my father attended a Christmas ball at an English country house. He was introduced to a woman whose name he did not catch, and he asked her to dance with him. As they danced in the ballroom, hung with mistletoe and holly, my father saw an officer who had once deceived him in India."

"Do you see that man over there?" said my father to his pretty partner. "Well, if there's one man in the world I hate, it's he."

"Yes," said the woman. "That's my husband."

"Yes," said my adroit father. "Yes, of course. That's why I hate him."

Neglect of a cough or cold often leads to serious trouble. To break up a cold in twenty-four hours and cure any cough that is curable, mix two ounces of Glycerine, a half ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure and eight ounces of pure Whisky. Take a teaspoonful every four hours. You can buy these at any good drug store and easily mix them in a large bottle.

INJURIES & SKIN SORES—QUICK CURE.

•A little child ran crying to her mother the other day with a nasty flesh wound and asked for Zam-Buk.

There lies a more powerful argument for Zam-Buk than even the scientists can bring. The child had had Zam-Buk before, and knew it eased pain and healed.

Zam-Buk works in two directions. Prevents worse results from a skin injury or skin disease (such as festering and blood poisoning) while it repairs the damage already done. Zam-Buk is entirely herbal, is pure, contains no trace of animal fat or mineral coloring. Surest and quickest known healer.

FATHER AND SON BENEFIT FROM USE OF THIS BALM.

Mr. Walter Adams, 177 Railway Ave., Stratford, says:—"My son, William, while playing barefooted about the backyard, cut his little toe on the sharp edge of a piece of tin. The toe was cut at the first joint, and almost severed from the foot. My wife hurriedly bathed it with warm water, afterwards applying some liniment spread with Zam-Buk. The healing balm quickly checked the flow of blood, eased and soothed the pain, and prevented inflammation and more serious results."

In a few weeks Zam-Buk healed the wound so nicely that my son was able once more to go about, and also to wear his shoes without the slightest inconvenience. Not only is Zam-Buk valuable for wounds and cuts, but, used as an embrocation, I have also found it effective for rheumatic pains.

Zam-Buk cures cuts, burns, eczema, ringworm, ulcers, cold cracks, and all skin diseases. Druggists and grocers, 50c box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

arise that may be difficult to cope with. The surest remedy to this end and one that is within reach of all is Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, the market. Do not delay, but try them now. One trial will convince

"Certainly," replied the judge.

"What difference does that make?"

"It makes a lot of difference. I

LIVES LOST IN BLAZING SHACK

Husband and Wife Cremated in Their House at Cobalt

A despatch from Cobalt says: Wm. Cope, aged 35, and his wife, Edith, aged 28, were burned to death in their three-roomed shack about 11.30 o'clock on Thursday night. The post mortem shows that prior to death by fire Mrs. Cope had bled freely from the nose, and the inference is that she received a blow, and may have been rendered unconscious or sufficiently hurt as to be unable to escape from the flames. Cope, who is a young Englishman, had been seen at a beer saloon on Argente Street earlier in the evening. He left that place in an intoxicated condition about half-past 10, and was seen by neighbors to go into his shack. The two were expecting to go to a dance that night, and Mrs. Cope had her hat and rubbers on when discovered.

GERMANY WANTS WHEAT

Her Agents Are Keen After Business and Are Sending Many, Inquiries

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The Germans are preparing to make an aggressive bid for the trade and market of Canada, and the Consul here is almost inundated with letters from German merchants and manufacturers, asking for reports on the conditions and requirements of consumers here. Germany evidently is anxious to secure a share of wheat for her supply, as she imported ninety million dollars' worth of the cereal last year. She also wants vast amounts of canned meats and beef. Manufacturers of iron and steel goods and smallwares are also seeking contracts, and as evidence of how they are going after business under approved conditions it may be said that several German firms are submitting tenders for electrical equipment required by the city, which has been but recently advertised.

A YEAR'S RECORD BUSINESS.

Splendid Showing of The Excelsior Life Insurance Company.

Nearly all the Canadian Life Insurance companies have in the past few years shown remarkable growth. The confidence of the people of Canada in their own institutions has been well merited. The managements of the most successful companies have been especially praiseworthy in their efforts to keep down expenses while enlarging their field of operations, adding to their assets and increasing their dividends to policy holders. Canadians have not been slow to recognize the excellent opportunities for safe and profitable investment afforded by these well-managed and thoroughly supervised financial institutions. The security offered by the regular Canadian companies is second to none. In practically no other line of financial activity can it be said that any company has ever entered into liquidation or failed to meet its obligations in full.

The Excelsior Life Insurance Company has from the first held a position of prominence in those factors which are of essential importance to policy holders. Economy of management, productiveness and security of investments and favorable mortality experience have been the watchwords of its management.

The Mortality Experience of the Excelsior Life is remarkable. The average mortality experience per 1,000 lives at risk for 10 years of all active Canadian companies is

WHY YOU ARE THIN; HOW TO GET FLESHY.

Discusses Causes of Thinness and Gives New Method of Increasing Weight and Rounding Out the Form.

Prescription Accomplishes Wonders

A treatment which anyone can prepare cheaply at home, has been found to increase the weight, improve the health, round out scrawny figures, improve the bust, brighten the eyes and put new color into the cheeks and lips of anyone who is too thin and bloodless. It puts flesh on those who have been always thin whether from disease or natural tendency, on those who by heavy eating and diet have in vain tried to increase; on those who feel well but can't get fat; and on those who have tried every known method in vain. It is a powerful aid to digestion, nutrition and assimilation. It assists the blood and nerves to distribute all over the body the flesh elements contained in food, and gives the thin person the same absorbing qualities possessed by the naturally fleshy.

Everybody is about the same, but certain elements and organs of blood and nerves are deficient and until this is corrected thin people will stay thin. The nutrition stays in the body after separation by the digestive functions instead of passing through unused, when this valuable treatment of blended medicines is used. Practically no one can remain thin who uses it, for it supplies the long felt need

SHEEP IN COLD-STORAGE.

Some Have Been Kept Over Two Years at Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: Montreal's Chief Food Inspector, Dr. McGarry, has been investigating cold-storage conditions here. In one cold-storage place Dr. McGarry has found that no less than two thousand sheep have been kept for the last two years. The owners of the sheep declare that they are still in good condition and fit for consumption. The report will show also that in some cold-storage places there is stored food that has gone beyond "prime" condition. It is likely that more stringent regulations will be enforced.

In none of the cases mentioned has it been found that the dogs were suffering from rabies, and as far as it is now known there has been no outbreak of the disease east of Toronto.

Rear-Admiral Says Size of War Vessels Must Increase.

A despatch from London says: The battleship of the future may be fifty per cent. larger than the present Dreadnought. This is the prediction of Rear-Admiral Bacon, commander of the British fleet.

security of investments and favorable mortality experience have been the watchwords of its management.

The Mortality Experience of the Excelsior Life is remarkable. The average mortality experience per 1,000 lives at risk for 10 years of all active Canadian companies is slightly over ten and a half per cent. The average of 90 prominent American companies for 1907 was exactly twelve per cent. The Excelsior's average for an entire period of nineteen years is only about four per cent.; and the year 1909 shows the lowest percentage in mortality experience of any year since the company began operations. The experience of the Excelsior in this regard is certainly noteworthy. The importance of a low mortality ratio can not be overestimated. It is of vastly greater significance to the policy holder than even a low expense ratio.

That Economy of Management has always been regarded in its true importance in the conduct of the affairs of the Excelsior is attested by the fact that Counsellor Tilley made the following reference to this company before the Royal Commission: "I have gone over the salaries; I do not think there is anything to be commented upon except that it has been the effort of the company to keep down expenses."

In some respects, however, the most interesting feature in the results of the Excelsior's business is the productiveness of its investments. During the past five years the average rate of interest earned by all the companies operating in Canada was a shade under five per cent. The average earnings of British Companies from the same source was four and a fifth per cent., while American companies averaged slightly better than the English. The Excelsior Life, however, earned during the same period the remarkable sum of more than seven per cent. on its investments. In 1905 its interest earnings were the highest of any company in Canada and for many years it has not ranked below second place. The far reaching effect of such earnings is too apparent for further comment.

In the year which has just closed the Excelsior increased its Cash Income thirteen per cent.; decreased its Expense and Death Claims Ratio nine per cent.; increased its Assets sixteen per cent.; increased its Government Reserve twenty-three per cent.; decreased its Liabilities thirty-seven per cent.; added to its Net Surplus on Policy Holders' Account forty-three per cent. and more than doubled its Net Unaltered Surplus. The total assets for the security of policy holders now stand at $140,000 for every $100.00 of Liability, a most unassailable position all through.

The management of the Excelsior has shown a most praiseworthy conservatism in the selection of new business, and in every essential of progressiveness, consistent with the utmost safety. It has given a most remarkable and satisfactory account of itself in the conduct of the company's affairs.

until this is corrected then people will stay thin. The nutrition stays in the body after separation by the digestive functions instead of passing through unused, when this valuable treatment of blended medicines is used. Practically no one can remain thin who uses it, for it supplies the long felt need. Mix a half pint bottle, three ounces of essence of pepsin, and three ounces of syrup of rhubarb. Then add one ounce compound essence cardiol. Shake and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce of tincture cadomene compound (not cadomom). Shake well and take a teaspoonful before and after meals. Drink plenty of water between meals and when retiring. Weigh before beginning.

SEVEN TONS OF SILVER.

Big Shipment of Cobalt Product for England.

A despatch from St. Catharines says: Three big lorry loads of solid silver passing along St. Paul street on their way to the Grand Trunk station on Tuesday evening testified to the richness of the Cobalt silver mines. The silver was all in bars weighing about seventy-five pounds apiece, each a hundred and seventy-six of them in all, the whole totalling up to about seven tons of solid silver. It all came from the Thorold smelter, and was smelted from Cobalt ore. The silver goes to London, England, through Montreal and Halifax. As it is very heavy stuff, its very weight adds to its security in transit, though every precaution will be taken en route. This is probably the greatest shipment of silver ever sent from St. Catharines.

SPRING SKIN TROUBLES.

Are Cured by Zam-Buk.

At this season, scores of people—girls and young women especially—find their faces disfigured by pimples, dark spots, eruptions, etc. The skin needs attention.

Just think what it has gone through! You have been out in rain and sleet and snow. You have been at one moment perspiring from skating, or some other exertion. Then you have stood to "cool off." You have spent hours of the day indoors at a temperature equal to summer heat. Then you have covered up your skin—except your face—and gone out into a temperature away below zero!

Don't forget that the skin has to do work just as any other organ of the body, and if you overwork it, it gives out. Zam-Buk is the remedy. Smear it lightly over the spots, the eruptions, the "sallow patches," at night, and notice how quickly your appearance improves. As the rich, refined, herbal essence sink deep into the tissue, the hard, scurvy-like patches are removed. Better color results. The cells of the skin become transparent, and the delicate bloom of health replaces the sallowness and pallor of disease.

Zam-Buk also cures eczema, ulcers, chaps, ringworm, cuts, burns, bruises, children's rashes, piles, etc. All druggists and stores at 50c. box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful substitutes and imitations.

Rear-Admiral Says Size of War Vessels Must Increase.

A despatch from London says: "The battleship of the future may be fifty per cent. larger than the present Dreadnought." This is the prediction of Rear-Admiral Bacon, commander of the original Dreadnought, who addressed the Institute of Naval Architecture on Wednesday. The size of the ships and the power of their guns must increase until actual war confirms or qualifies the present theories of naval construction, he added.

SHOT HIS SISTER DEAD.

Old Gun Had Hung on Kitchen Wall for Years.

A despatch from Centreville, N. B., says: On Saturday, Wm. Lewis, a prominent farmer, accidentally shot his sister, Mrs. Esther Gallup dead. Lewis took his gun from the kitchen wall, where it had been hanging unused for years, with the intention of cleaning it. Not knowing it was loaded, he snapped the hammer, and the charge of buckshot blew his sister's head nearly off. The victim was sitting in a chair with her two-year-old grandchild prattling by her side when the accident occurred, and the little one's escape is a miracle. Lewis, who is 67 years old, is prostrated with grief.

LOGICAL ECZEMA CURE ENDORSED BY PHYSICIANS.

Dr. R. A. Folkerts, of Duluth, Minn., tells of his success in treating patients with D. D. D. Prescription:

"There was a man here suffering from eczema for the last fourteen years, and I applied the D. D. D. treatment. I also applied it to a man of West Duluth, Minn., who has been suffering with Eczema in his feet, and the second treatment in both cases cleared the skin almost absolutely. The first application is a balm, and its soothing effect is beyond expression. I shall never be without it, and shall use it among my patients altogether."

No matter how terribly you suffer from eczema, salt rheum, ringworm, etc., you will feel instantly soothed and the itch allayed at once when a few drops of this compound of oil of wintergreen, thymol, glycerine, etc., is applied. The cures all seem to be permanent.

POSTOFFICE ROBBED.

Safe-Cracker Makes a Big Haul at Comber.

A despatch from Windsor says: The postoffice at Comber was robbed at 4 o'clock on Sunday morning by a lone burglar, who is thought to have secured between $250 and $300 in currency. The safe was drilled and blown in the usual professional style, nitro-glycerine being used as the explosive. News of the robbery reached here at noon on Sunday, when Magistrate Anderson notified the local authorities by long-distance telephone. A man who refuses to give his name was arrested in Comber on Sunday night, and the authorities there are inclined to think he is guilty of the job.

COST OF LIVING.

How Grain and Fodder Have Advanced in Few Years.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Department of Labor publishes in the current number of The Labor Gazette some additional results of the special investigation being conducted with regard to the increase in prices of the household commodities contributing to the high cost of living and covering the past twenty year period. This month the report deals with prices of grain and fodder in Canada since 1890. It is shown that in general the lowest point for barley, oats, wheat, corn and hay was reached in the years 1896 and 1897. Since then there has been a pronounced upward movement, and wholesale prices for 1908 were approximately 70 per cent. higher than in the year 1897, and approximately 50 per cent. above the average price of the last decade of the nineteenth century.

PHILADELPHIA STRIKE ENDS.

Street Railway Company Grant Nearly all Demands.

A despatch from Philadelphia says: Senator Boies Penrose broke the strike on Sunday night. One by one he called before him the reluctant directors of the Rapid Transit Company and forced them to accept the terms outlined last Friday night by powerful financial interests. The boss of the situation said that he would break the Rapid Transit Company into smith and scatter the pieces over the streets if they continued to hold out another hour. He even more than hinted at a receivership. The transit officials caved in. By 10 o'clock on Sunday night they had agreed to everything that Penrose demanded, guaranteeing terms that give the Carman's Union nine-tenths of everything they demanded. Even recognition of the Amalgamated Union, through a Grievance Committee, is included in the capitulation.

Family Cough Syrup

Cures Any Cough in Five Hours.
NEW PRESCRIPTION HERE.

Here is given the most effective cough prescription known to the medical world. It is a mild laxative, too, and this is what a body needs when suffering with cough and cold on the lungs. A cough or cold indicates poisons in the system, causing inflammation and congestion. Nearly all cough syrups relieve, but make the trouble worse by their constipating effects. This prescription not only relieves quickly, but it cures any cough that is curable. Get one-half ounce fluid wild cherry bark, one ounce compound essence cardiol and three ounces syrup white pine compound. Mix in a bottle. Take for acute cough or bronchitis twenty drops every half hour for four hours. Then one-half to one teaspoonful three or four times daily. Give children less according to age. A few hours' treatment will cure and heal the throat and lungs of all but consumptives. Cut this out and give it to some friend who may need it to be saved from an early death by consumption.

NA-DRU-CO

Formulae Have Been Well Tried Out

Though the NA-DRU-CO line of Medicinal and Toilet Preparations have been on sale for a few months only, don't think for minute that in buying NA-DRU-CO goods you are experimenting with new or untried preparations.

Their Origin

The twenty-one wholesale drug firms now united in the "National" had all of them lengthy careers, some for fifty to one hundred years, prior to the union. Each firm had acquired or developed a number of valuable formulae for medicinal and toilet preparations, all of which became the property of the "National". Since the union our expert chemists have carefully gone over these formulae and selected the best for the NA-DRU-CO line. Every formula has been carefully studied by these experts, improved if possible, and then thoroughly tested again, in actual use, before we consider it good enough to bear the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark.

An Example

A good example of what we mean is NA-DRU-CO Nervosone for Brain Fog or nervous break-down. The formula was pronounced the most scientific combination of nerve medicines, but this was enough for us; we had it tried out with a dozen different kind of Brain workers—School Teachers, Lawyers, Book-keepers—as well as Society leaders and home workers, and everywhere the result was so good that we adopted it as one of the best of the NA-DRU-CO line.

There are therefore no experiments among NA-DRU-CO preparations. We have invested altogether too much time, work and money in the NA-DRU-CO line to take any chances of discrediting it with preparations that might not prove satisfactory. We make absolutely certain that each preparation is satisfactory before we endorse it with the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark.

Ask your physician or your druggist about the firm behind NA-DRU-CO preparations and about the NA-DRU-CO line. They can tell you, for we will furnish them, on request, a full list of the ingredients in any NA-DRU-CO article.

"Money Back"

If by any chance you should not be entirely satisfied with any NA-DRU-CO article you try, return the unused portion to the druggist from whom you bought it and he will refund your money—willingly, too, because we return to him every cent he gives back to you.

If your druggist should not have the particular NA-DRU-CO article you ask for in stock he can get it for you within two days from our nearest wholesale branch.

A WONDERFUL INCREASE

Canada's February Trade Figures Are Most Satisfactory.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The total trade of Canada for February was $10,291,201, an increase of $8,202,374 over February of last year. For the eleven months of the fiscal year the total trade has been $610,577,981, an increase of $104,113,307, or over 20 per cent., as compared with the corresponding eleven months of the last fiscal year, and constituting a new record for Canadian trade. Imports for the month totalled $30,331,462, an increase of $7,152,791. For the eleven months the imports totalled $232,291,669, an increase of $68,131,239. Exports of domestic products for the month totalled $13,357,043, an increase of a little over one million. Exports of domestic products for the eleven months totalled $257,012,202, an increase of $32,865,650. Of this latter increase, about seventeen millions was in agricultural exports, about seven and a half millions was in exports of the forest, and about two millions in exports of manufactures. Exports of foreign products for the eleven months totalled $21,174,050, an increase of a little over three millions. The total customs revenue for the eleven months was $55,781,333, an increase of $11,359,055.

Three Take Poison After Playing Funeral March.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: Something like an epidemic of suicide, due to neurasthenia and melancholia, was recently remarked here, and further attention was called to it on Thursday by the suicides of three girls of social status, one of them heiress to $10,000,000. The three met, and after one of them had played Chopin's "Funeral March," all drank poison and died. They left letters saying they were tired of life. Fifteen other suicides, mostly girls, were reported on Thursday. The Russian law severely punishes attempts at suicide, but a bill has been proposed by some members of the Council of the Empire abolishing the penalties on the ground that life is an individual's private property and he should be allowed to dispose of it accordingly.

SUMMER WEATHER IN WEST.

Warmest March in Memory of the Old-timers.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The Summer weather continues in the West, and old-timers say it is the warmest March on record. Seeding is already under way in many parts of the West, the earliest for twenty-five years. In southern Manitoba and around Brandon a number of farmers have already started seeding, and in many districts work will be quite general by the middle of next week if the weather continues. In Saskatchewan, seeding also has been started at such widely separated points as Swift Current, Battleford, Humboldt and Indian Head. In southern Alberta the seeding has been under way for over a week.

REFORMING BOYS.

There is only one way of reforming a boy and that is by securing his friendship, his goodwill, his co-operation. To reform a boy who is determined not to be reformed is about as impossible as attempting to drive water up a hill. He may be kept for months or for years in the institution and go through prescribed routine with apparent obedience and yet at the end of it all come out a far worse boy than when he entered. But get into friendly, sympathetic relationship with the same boy, learn his wishes and aspirations, at the right psychological moment place him out amid good surroundings, show that you trust and believe in him, visit and encourage him from time to time, and if he fails to respond you can put it down that he is deficient and that his proper place is in the asylum for the feeble-minded. Normal boys like to be regarded as rational human beings and they have a great depth of loyalty for the man who knows how to treat them right and to rely upon their honor. —J. J. Kelso.

A remarkable example of the advantages of making reliable goods is to be found in the demand which comes from the great Canadian West for the pure wool tweeds made by the Hewsons of Nova Scotia. Attractive Millinery Display by Dorse & Co.

The millinery opening of Dorse & Co., Saturday, attracted a large number of visitors and customers. This year there is more of a variety in styles than there has been for many years past, the large hats are larger than ever but roll off the face and are turned up either in front or at the side. But medium and small sized hats will be worn just as much as the larger styles. The Turban which was worn largely last season is still as greatly favored, both for dress and suite hats. Among the many beautiful hats was a very pretty design known as the Marquet shape. It was a black chip with broad white band on the edge of brim with band of black velvet around crown and over the side fastened with a jewelled buckle, three quill feathers falling back over the crown. Another was a White Chip, rolling front and back with a wreath of pink and amethyst roses mixed with white wheat falling over the side and finished with black velvet. A large number of military hats are also shown and these promise to become very popular this year. A hat very much admired was a large high crown turban, covered with mustard roses, trimmed with maline and velvet same shade. A Bonnet was also shown in tuscany straw, draped with a King Blue Chiffon Veil, suitable for motoring. For trimmings there is every tint of roses on display. Among the new shades are Cerise, Rosewood, Old Rose, Arrowplane, Chanticleer, Red King Blue. Some very choice designs in children's hats and bonnets, made in straw and lace.

Dr. Cameron Wilson, practising medicine and surgery in Lindsay for the past year, has decided to make his home in Napanee, where he will have a wider field. Dr. Wilson proved himself a clever practitioner. Mrs. Wilson has been a valuable acquisition to the musical talent, being a violinist of considerable ability, and was ever ready to assist in local functions, where her charming numbers were listened to with a high degree of pleasure. The rate of taxes for 1910 will be 25 mills on the dollar, instead of 24 mills as reported in last issue. The council at its session on Monday evening changed the 16 mills for general purposes to 17 mills. Two items were added to the estimated expenditure which totalled $8000, and the half mill added to the general rate will increase the estimated receipts by $616.25. The contingent item was changed to read $1213.25. With the above changes the estimates as they appeared in our last issue are correct.

Belleville March 18 - The death occurred, Thursday morning, of two prominent citizens, brother and sister, in the person of John R. Brower and his sister, Miss Jane Brower. The former died about five o'clock and his sister an hour before. Mr. Brower was one of the best known residents of this district. He was for years treasurer of the township of Sydney, very wealthy at one time, owning three valuable farms in Sidney township, and the owner of five hundred head of cattle. Latterly, he lived a retired life. He was the best known cheese exporter in this district.

The Horticultural Society in an unostentatious manner is doing a good work for our town. It has undertaken and is successfully carrying out the adornment of Harvey Warner Park, the court house and post office. Public schools and churches, have received liberal donations of vines and bulbs. The friendly rivalry among the members has contributed towards the beautifying of the town and now we see better kept lawns and more spacious and prettier flower beds. This spring, each member is receiving one dollar's worth of seeds of his own selection, which means thousands of attractive blossoms for the summer months. More shrubs will be added to the Park and the dead trees removed and others put in their place. The orders of some thirty members have already been forwarded, and others will be sent in as soon as received. This is one organization which gives back to its members double the value of the membership fee and serves the public as well. The liberal Government grants enables it to accomplish this double purpose.

Rapley's Body Found

The River Gives up Its Dead.

On Wednesday morning the body of B. F. Rapley, the commercial traveller who disappeared from the Campbell House, Napanee, on the evening of October 19th last, was found floating in the Napanee River opposite the pines about two miles from Napanee by Lincoln Brown, son of Mr. Alvin Brown, South river Road. Mr. Brown at once notified Mr. Allan Wagar, a neighbor and as soon as a horse could be hitched up they drove to Napanee and reported the gruesome find.

Chief of Police Graham and constable Geo. Greer at once went to the pines and securing a boat brought the body to land, and later the remains were taken to Carscallens undertaking rooms. In the pockets of the clothes were found $83.35. Rapley's two bank books, his travellers' certificate cards and other articles easily identified as the property of the missing traveller. In his cuffs were also found gold links marked B. F. R. His watch had stopped at 12 minutes to 10. The body was badly decomposed and unrecognizable from its long immersion in the water, over five months.

Professor Morrison's Lecture.
The meeting of the Historical Society on Thursday evening, March 17th, was well attended and those present were favoured in hearing one of the best lectures ever given before this organization. Professor J. L. Morrison of Queen's University, Kingston, was the lecturer and his subject was "Ireland and the Irish Question" one very appropriate for St. Patrick's Day.
Prof. Morrison prefaced his remarks with a statement that he was presenting only his own views on the question, and expressed the desire that any who disagreed with him should be given an opportunity to reply. He very carefully explained the origin of the Irish race and the conquest of Ireland and told of the conditions which existed on the island when Great Britain first governed it. After telling of the mistakes which had been made in the three great Irish questions relating to the church the land and the schools, he explained what had been done to rectify the errors. The late Mr. Gladstone's long association with the Irish question was carefully reviewed and the speaker paid a glowing tribute to England's most eminent statesman of the nineteenth century.
Whether in entire sympathy with Professor Morrison's views or not, one could hardly fail to appreciate his beautifully worded character sketch of Mr. Gladstone. The lecture closed with a few remarks on the question of Home Rule for Ireland, and with an expression of Prof. Morrison's personal views on the subject. He told particularly of his views before coming to Canada, and how they had changed since living here.
The President of the society thanked the lecturer on behalf of the members for his kindness in again providing such an excellent evening's entertainment, and many of those present took occasion to compliment him after the meeting closed. Prof. Morrison will always have a hearty welcome from the people of Napanee. The meeting closed with the National anthem, God Save The King.

"The Best Editorial Page In Canada"

The Toronto Daily Star publishes every day six columns of editorials and editorial features—and there's not a dry line in the six columns.

John Lewis, author of "The Life of John Brown" (Morang's Series) has few equals in Canada. He is by many considered to be second only to Goldwin Smith as a master of English.

Joseph T. Clark, known as "Mack" when he was editor of "Saturday Night", is known throughout Canada as a keen, clever and witty writer. His cables and letters on the British elections from England, where he was sent by the Star, have attracted wide attention.

Two things to be specially noted about all the Star's editorials are first that they are always fair—no bitterness or biased partizanship—and second that they are never dull, but deal in a bright way with the subjects in which you and your neighbors are interested.

In a lighter vein are the "Chronicles of the Khan"—delightfully humorous-pathetic studies from real life, particularly rural life—"Uncle Walt's Corner" of clever poetry in prose—and "A Little of Everything"—that you can always count on for a pleasant ten minutes.

A regular reading of the Star's Editorial page will keep a man informed on every topic of live interest to Canadians. Why not subscribe now?
